MODERN APPELLATE PRACTICE CLARIFIED

OVER 150,000 Appeal and Error questions have been determined by our courts since the C.J.S. volumes covering the subject were published 20 years ago. In addition, modern statutes and court rules have made many great changes in the mode and manner of appellate review. These facts have necessitated a complete revision of this important practice title.

Every effort has been made to reduce the tremendous case load to a concise statement of the law, so that a minimum amount of time must be devoted to finding the entire law on any given point. While there are some points which are so well established that they have become almost axiomatic, such as the rule that an appellate court will not review an exercise of discretion in the absence of an abuse thereof, the subject is by no means a static one. The wealth of material on the subject, instead of being a time-consuming burden, now, through these convenient new volumes, merely leads to greater certainty in appellate practice.

The thousands of times the courts have quoted and cited C.J.S. Appeal and Error attest to its authoritative nature and to its description by the courts as "A thoroughly dependable text work." (McCullen, Presiding Judge, in Stone v. Boston, St. Louis Court of Appeals, Mo., 218 S.W.2d 783, 787).

The many excellent features of the original volumes have been retained. Additional factual reading notes and new sections have been added in order to incorporate and integrate more appropriately the later decisions. A completely revised and up-to-date Descriptive-Word-Index has been prepared which will lead you to the precise case in point.

XVI. REVIEW—Continued

F. DISCRETION OF LOWER COURT

1. In General

§ 1583. Power to Review

a. In general
b. What constitutes abuse of discretion

a. In General

(1) General rule
(2) Particular applications of rule

(1) General Rule

As a general rule, an appellate court will not review the action or rulings of the trial court with reference to matters resting in the latter's judicial discretion, unless such discretion has been clearly and prejudicially abused; and some decisions appear to recognize an absolute or arbitrary discretion in certain classes of cases, which is never reviewable.

Quoted in: Tex.—Schroeder v. Brandon, 172 S.W.2d 488, 491, 141 Tex. 319.

Broadly speaking, the exercise of judicial discretion has been declared subject to review;[4.50] but it has also been held that, ordinarily, where a judge is vested with discretion, his doing, or refusing to do, the act in question is not reviewable on appeal,[4.55] that it is not the use or exercise of the discretion of a lower court that is reviewable, but only the alleged abuse thereof,[4.60] and that the only question for determination on review of a discretionary ruling is whether the trial court has abused its discretion.[4.65]

4.50 Fla.—Western Union Tel. Co. v. Suit, 15 So.2d 33, 153 Fla. 490.
Ill.—Dawson v. Maxwell, 141 N.E.2d 642, 13 Ill.App.2d 228.
N.J.—Cortese v. Cortese, 76 A.2d 717, 10 N.J.Super. 152.
Tex.—Paul v. Houston Oil Co. of Tex., Civ.App., 211 S.W.2d 345, error refused no reversible error.
Wis.—Hartwig v. Harvey, 27 N.W.2d 363, 250 Wis. 478, 15 A.L.R.2d 333.
47 C.J. p 548 note 70.
Discretionary action and matters of practice as decisions reviewable see supra § 111.
"No language, however strong, will take away the right of review where there is shown an abuse of discretion."
Ohio.—Thompson v. Stonom, App., 57 N.E 2d 788, 790.
"The fact that a determination of the issue involves the discretion of the court does not preclude this court from reviewing the acts of the trial court for abuse of discretion."
Ind.—State ex rel. Steers v. Holovachka, 142 N.E.2d 593, 597.

Ground for reversal

(1) An abuse of discretion is legal ground for reversing a judgment.
Ga.—Alford v. Alford, 9 S.E.2d 895, 190 Ga. 562.

(2) Grounds for reversal generally see infra §§ 1886–1914.

In equity

(1) In equity, an appeal brings to supreme judicial court questions of discretion as well as questions of law.
Mass.—McDade v. Moynihan, 115 N. E.2d 372, 330 Mass. 437, 39 A.L.R. 2d 1223.

(2) In equity, questions of discretion, like other questions of fact, are open on appeal, but error of law or fact must be shown by record on appeal, in order that discretionary action may be reversed.
Mass.—Long v. George, 7 N.E.2d 149, 296 Mass. 574.

Abuse of discretion

(1) The question of abuse of discretion is always open to judicial inquiry on appeal.
Ill.—Black Hawk Motor Transit Co. v. Illinois Commerce Commission, 48 N.E.2d 341, 383 Ill. 57.

(2) The question of abuse of discretion is always subject to review in the supreme court.
Ill.—Whitney v. Madden, 79 N.E.2d 593, 400 Ill. 185, certiorari denied 69 S.Ct. 55, 335 U.S. 828, 93 L.Ed. 382.

(3) An abuse of discretion by trial court may be reviewed by supreme court on appeal.
Utah.—Salt Lake City v. Anderson, 148 P.2d 346, 106 Utah 350.

Exceptions

Exercise of discretion, vested by law in justice of superior court or supreme court of probate is not reviewable on exceptions; but where justice finds facts without evidence or exercises discretion without authority, his actions may be challenged by exceptions.
Me.—Sard v. Sard, 83 A.2d 286, 147 Me. 46.

4.55 N.C.—Harmon v. Harmon, 95 S.E.2d 355, 245 N.C. 83.

Tex.—Janelli v. Janelli, Civ.App., 220 S.W.2d 255, mandamus denied Janelli v. Bond, 225 S.W.2d 824, 148 Tex. 416, and set aside, Civ.App., 227 S.W.2d 889, mandamus overruled.
Vt.—Russell v. Pilger, 37 A.2d 403, 113 Vt. 537.

Sole issue

Tex.—International Ass'n of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Local 213, A. F. of L. v. Sharp, Civ. App., 202 S.W.2d 506.

Ultimate issue

Tex.—International Ass'n of Machinists Union, Local No. 1488, v. Federated Ass'n of Accessory Workers, Civ.App., 105 S.W.2d 301.

Discretionary order

While an appeal may be taken from a discretionary order, the matter will be reviewed solely to determine whether there was an abuse of discretion.
Wis.—Hartwig v. Harvey, 27 N.W. 2d 363, 250 Wis. 478, 15 A.L.R.2d 333.

Interlocutory order as to writ

(1) In all appeals from interlocutory orders granting or refusing a writ or dissolving or refusing to dissolve one, sole question is whether trial court abused its discretion in entering order appealed from.
Tex.—Rudd v. Wallace, Civ.App., 232 S.W.2d 121—Jeter v. State, Civ. App., 184 S.W.2d 716.

As a general rule, if there has not been a clear, palpable, manifest, or flagrant abuse, or an improper or erroneous exercise, of discretion resulting to the complaining party's prejudice, the appellate court will not review or revise the action or rulings of the trial court with reference to matters resting in the latter's judicial discretion;[5] and the exercise of its discretion by the trial court will not be reviewed

(2) This is especially true if the order was based on conflicting evidence.

Tex.—Rudd v. Wallace, supra.

Discretionary order of lower court

(1) The rule stated in the text has been applied to discretionary orders of the lower court.

(2) Generally, appellate courts will not interfere on jurisdictional grounds with trial court's reconsideration of discretionary order not based on merits of litigation.

Cal.—Key System Transit Lines v. Superior Court of State, in and for Alameda County, 222 P.2d 867, 36 C.2d 184.

Svistunoff v. Svistunoff, 239 P.2d 650, 108 C.A.2d 638.

In a matter of equitable cognizance, supreme court will not substitute its judgment for that of trial court in absence of a clear abuse of discretion.

Okl.—Missouri, Kansas-Texas R. Co. v. District Court of Creek County, 294 P.2d 579.

Serious error; autocratic action

Questions within discretion of trial court are much better decided by that court than by appellate courts, and decisions of trial judges will be disturbed only where it is apparent that some serious error or abuse of discretion or autocratic action has occurred.

Md.—Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co. v. Samuel R. Rosoff, Limited, 73 A.2d 461, 195 Md. 402.

Mistake of law

(1) If a discretionary order is made by a trial court as a result of an erroneous view of the law, the order may be reversed without establishing an abuse of discretion on part of trial court.

Wis.—Miller v. Belanger, 81 N.W.2d 545, 275 Wis. 187.

(2) Exercise by trial court of its judicial discretion will not be reviewed by the supreme court unless clearly abused in the circumstances or based on a mistake of law as to powers of trial court.

R.I.—Strzebinska v. Jary, 193 A. 747, 58 R.I. 496, 112 A.L.R. 391.

Regulating and controlling business of court

(1) The judge has a discretion in regulating and controlling the business of the court, and the appellate court should never interfere with the exercise of such discretion, unless it is plainly apparent that wrong has resulted from its abuse.

Ga.—Banister v. Hubbard, 62 S.E.2d 761, 82 Ga.App. 813.

(2) Court of appeals has no lawful power or authority to control discretion of trial courts in legitimate exercise of their discretion in conducting business before them, unless that discretion has been abused, or some law of land violated.

Ga.—Digsby v. Johnson, 61 S.E.2d 792, 82 Ga.App. 611.

(3) Trial courts are endowed with large administrative discretion in the conduct of their business and, in absence of abuse of discretion, supreme court will not interfere in such matters.

Ind.—Rogers v. Youngblood, 78 N.E. 2d 663, 226 Ind. 165.

(4) Appellate courts will not interfere with judicial discretion of trial judge to see that the business coming into his court is disposed of in an orderly manner according to the laws and rules of procedure applicable thereto, unless it appears that the discretion has been abused.

where it manifestly appears that justice has been done without sacrificing the rights of litigants.[5.5] In all matters within the discretion of the trial court, appellate courts should hesitate to disturb its actions,[5.10] especially where the controversy involves a factual situation;[5.15] and where a trial court has exercised a legal discretion, the appellate court, although clothed with power of discretion under statute, will be slow to interfere with that discretion.[5.20]

Great weight is, accordingly, given to the judgment of the trial court on discretionary matters;[6] but it is not necessarily conclusive,[7] and the general rule above stated does not give the trial judge an entirely free hand in discretionary matters.[7.5] If the discretion involved is not an arbitrary, absolute one, but a judicial discretion which must be exercised within legal lines in accordance with fixed principles of law, its exercise is subject to review and revision for plain abuse resulting in prejudice

Tex.—Looney v. Traders & General Ins. Co., Civ.App., 231 S.W.2d 735, error refused no reversible error.

Instantly visible injustice
There is no error in discretionary ruling unless trial judge plainly and unmistakably does an injustice so apparent as to be instantly visible without argument.
Me.—Young v. Carignan, 129 A.2d 216.

Exceptions
When some palpable error has been committed, or an apparent injustice has been done, ruling is reviewable on exceptions.

Reversal rare
An exercise of discretion by trial judge should rarely be reversed.
Mass.—Amory v. Commonwealth, 72 N.E.2d 549, 321 Mass. 240, 174 A.L.R. 370.

Imputed error of law or legal inference
Discretionary rulings of the trial court are not generally considered on appeal, unless accompanied by some imputed error of law or legal inference.

(2) This rule has been applied.
Mass.—Briggs v. Briggs, 65 N.E.2d 9, 319 Mass. 149.

Leave to file bill of review
On appeal from superior court decree granting leave to file a bill of review on ground of newly discovered evidence, weight must be given to exercise of discretionary power by that court, and error of law or fact must be shown by the record to justify reversal of action of trial court.
Mass.—Curley v. City of Boston, 43 N.E.2d 377, 312 Mass. 58.

7. Mo.—State ex rel. and to Use of Piepmeier v. Camren, 41 S.W.2d 902, 226 Mo.App. 100.

Much latitude is given trial courts in exercise of judicial discretion, but not every discretion so exercised is without appellate review.
Tex.—Pearl Assur. Co. v. Williams, Civ.App., 167 S.W.2d 808.

In equity, questions of discretion, like other questions of fact, are open on appeal.
Mass.—D. J. Doyle & Co. v. Darden, 103 N.E.2d 248, 328 Mass. 286, 288.

Reviewing court cannot disregard questions that fairly challenge action of trial court and is not warranted in disregarding such questions by simply reiterating principle that reviewing court should not interfere with discretion of trial judge.
Ill.—Stobbs v. Cumby, 132 N.E.2d 448, 9 Ill.App.2d 138.

Discretion of appellate division
(1) Appellate division may review matters of discretion; since that court is a branch of the supreme court, whenever discretion is vested in supreme court, such discretion may be exercised by appellate division in reviewing action of trial term or special term, although trial term or special term has not been guilty of abuse of discretion.
N.Y.—O'Connor v. Papertsian, 131 N. E.2d 883, 309 N.Y. 465.

(2) Appellate division should correct error if right is shown to exist to which special term has not accorded proper recognition.

7.5 S.C.—Page v. North Carolina Mut. Life Ins. Co., 35 S.E.2d 716, 207 S.C. 277.

Action as basis for reversal
Action of trial judge commonly characterized as discretionary may constitute a basis for reversal, although it is only in the exceptional case that a discretionary act of a trial judge will lead to a reversal.
N.J.—Schuttler v. Reinhardt, 86 A.2d 438, 17 N.J.Super. 480.

Litigant's right to reasonable action
Court of appeals has not power or inclination to control trial judge's discretion in deciding particular matter in particular way or to direct court as to what judgment to enter; but litigant has constitutional right to have trial court act seasonably and reasonably and render some sort of judgment and statutory right to appeal from judgment entered, if trial court has power to grant appeal.
Ky.—Ragland v. Baxter, 177 S.W.2d 579, 296 Ky. 457.

to the complaining party;[8] if the court goes beyond the confines of its discretionary latitude, its action is considered not as discretionary, but as erroneous.[8.5]

In this connection, judicial discretion is the option which the judge may exercise between the doing and the not doing of a thing, the doing of which cannot be demanded as an absolute right of the party asking that it be done,[8.10] or is the power of a court to determine a question on fair judicial consideration with respect to what is right and equitable under the law and the circumstances, and directed by reason and conscience to a just result.[8.15] Judicial discretion requires action in conformity with law on the facts and circumstances before the court after hearing and due consideration;[8.20] but it has also been held that judicial discretion, as habitually employed, simply means that the case before the court is governed, not by legal rules, but by some well-established equitable principles.[8.25] The exercise of judicial discretion implies conscientious judgment, not arbitrary action, taking into account the law and the particular circumstances of the case;[8.30] the essence of judicial discretion is

Whim of judge as to action
Judicial discretion does not imply that a court may act, or fail to act, according to the mere whim or caprice of the presiding judge, but means a discretion exercised within the limits of the applicable principles of law and equity.
Fla.—Ellard v. Godwin, 77 So.2d 617.

Taking of action as question of fact
Whether or not action within discretion of court shall be taken is ordinarily a question of fact whether, under rules of law and established principles of practice, having respect to rights and interests of all parties, justice and equity require action in question.

(2) Judicial power, as contradistinguished from the power of the laws, has no existence, and courts are mere instruments of the law and can will nothing; and when they are said to exercise a discretion, it is a mere legal discretion, to be exercised in discerning the course prescribed by law.

8.30 N.J.—Hager v. Weber, 81 A.2d 155, 7 N.J. 201.

"Judicial" distinguished from "arbitrary" discretion
(1) "When invoked as a guide to judicial action, it ["discretion"] means a sound discretion, that is to say, a discretion exercised not arbi-

the exercise of judgment directed by conscience and reason, as opposed to capricious or arbitrary action,[8.35] and the exercise of discretion does not necessarily follow along strict rules of law, but may be exercised in what the court conceives to be demanded in justice.[8.40]

Some decisions, however, appear to recognize, in certain classes of cases, the existence of an arbitrary, absolute discretion which is not subject to review at all;[9] and it has been held that discretionary rulings may, on occasion, be reviewed, but not when exercise of the best judgment of the judge on the occasion that called therefor was guided by the law.[9.5]

If a ruling which might have been made as a matter of discretion is based entirely on other grounds, the appellate court will not consider whether the ruling would constitute a proper exercise of the discretionary power.[10]

Where the trial court is not entitled, in the particular circumstances, to exercise discretion, the record does not present for review a question of abuse of discretion.[10.5] trarily or willfully, but with regard to what is right and equitable under the circumstances and the law, and directed by the reason and conscience of the judge to a just result."

Neb.—Pettegrew v. Pettegrew, 260 N. W. 287, 289, 128 Neb. 783.

(2) "It is the general rule that matters which rest in the judicial discretion of the trial court cannot be reviewed by this court. . . . It is, however, a sound judicial and not an arbitrary discretion which must be exercised. . . . Abuse of discretion as to specifications [among other matters not in question] becomes error of law and is subject to revision."

Mass.—Nickerson v. Glines, 107 N.E. 942, 943, 944, 220 Mass. 333.

(3) "Judicial discretion" is a discretion which is not arbitrary, vague, or fanciful, or controlled by humor or caprice, but is governed by principle and regular procedure for the accomplishment of the ends of right and justice.

N.M.—Pankey v. Hot Springs Nat. Bank, 84 P.2d 649, 653, 42 N.M. 674.

(4) "In the absence of something to indicate that a discretionary power has been exercised arbitrarily, capriciously, or contrary to legal usage, we are bound by the result. So long as such discretion is exercised judicially, the result is beyond our reach."

Discretionary action and matters of practice as decisions reviewable see supra § 111.

When a court has authority to act "within its discretion," it is vested with power to decide as it considers proper, and its discretion is not subject to review by the Court of Appeals. Watson v. Cook, 170 Md. 377, 380 A. 908. To hold that the exercise of discretion may be reviewed by a tribunal other than that upon which it is conferred would pervert and destroy the meaning of the word.

Md.—Schneider v. Hawkins, 16 A.2d 861, 864, 179 Md. 21.

Procedure not affecting ultimate rights

The term "judicial discretion" has two meanings, one pertaining to procedure not affecting the ultimate rights of litigants, from which no appeal lies; the other involving legal and equitable rights determinable only according to applicable principles and not according to arbitrary will of court.

Tex.—Sunshine Bus Lines v. Craddock, Civ.App., 112 S.W.2d 248, affirmed 133 S.W.2d 124, 134 Tex. 388.

Area of discretion of court

While an appeal will not lie from an order or decree passed in the exercise of the discretion of the lower court, question whether subject matter of order or decree is within the area of the discretion of the lower court is open to examination on an appeal in the same case, since a court cannot improvidently extend the exercise of its jurisdiction to matters which lie beyond its legitimate reach.

Md.—Saltzgaver v. Saltzgaver, 35 A. 2d 810, 182 Md. 624—Gottschalk v. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co., 62 A. 810, 102 Md. 521.

Motion for judgment on pleadings

(1) Trial judge had absolute discretion over motion or rule for judgment on pleadings, and his ruling dismissing the motion was not reviewable.

La.—Smith v. Parker, App., 59 So.2d 718.

(2) The trial judge's refusal to render judgment on the petition is not subject to review by appeal; where trial judge, on the petition and answer, makes rule absolute and grants judgment, appeal lies, but it is only when judge has arbitrarily abused discretion that appellate court is called on to pass on his ruling.

Rulings made as matters of admissibility

Where rulings which might have been made as matters of discretion were instead made as matters of law, of admissibility, the correctness of the rulings must be reviewed on same basis.

Prohibition

Order granting or denying remedy of prohibition is reviewable on appeal, where there is no room for exercise of discretion.

N.Y.—Baltimore Mail S. S. Co. v. Fawcett, 199 N.E. 628, 269 N.Y. 379, 104 A.L.R. 1068, conformed to 287 N.Y.S. 159, 247 App.Div. 739, certiorari denied Madsen v. Baltimore Mail S. S. Co., 56 S.Ct. 939, 298 U.S. 675, 82 L.Ed. 1396.

Matters of procedure. A reviewing court will not interfere in matters of procedure calculated to determine with reasonable speed the substantive rights of the parties, unless there is an unreasonable abuse of discretion.[10.10]

Abuse as matter of law. It has been held that the discretion of the trial court will be upset on appeal only on a showing that as a matter of law the trial court abused its discretion,[10.15] or that its discretion was erroneously exercised as a matter of law.[10.20]

Liability or extent thereof. A more strict scrutiny of the discretion of the trial court is due, and must be applied, in those cases in which defendant's liability is debatable than in those in which the extent only of that liability is in issue.[10.25]

(2) Particular Applications of Rule

The general rule that the exercise of the judicial discretion of the trial court will not be reviewed or revised on appeal in the absence of an abuse of discretion has been applied to a wide variety of rulings or actions of trial courts.

Cases on matters involving the exercise of a judicial discretion within the application of the rules stated supra subdivision a (1) of this section are legion. Among those not specifically considered infra §§ 1586–1641 are the grant or refusal of discretionary equitable relief or orders,[11] including specific performance;[11.5] determination of the na-

Judicial discretion

The discretion exercised by the trial court in granting or denying specific performance is a judicial discretion, to be exercised in conformity with established principles and rules, and is therefore subject to review for abuse.

Vt.—Sparrow v. Cimonetti, 58 A.2d 875, 115 Vt. 292.

No hardship or injustice

Remedy of specific performance is discretionary, and where neither hardship nor injustice results to defeated party, court of review will not interfere with a judgment which requires its enforcement.

(2) Where there was no dispute with respect to facts, but only a question of law as to whether case was proper one for declaratory judgment, no legal discretion was involved, as against contention that the exercise of discretion by the lower court in assuming jurisdiction under Declaratory Judgment Act should not be disturbed on appeal unless supreme court could say that there had been an abuse of discretion.
Or.—Oregon Creamery Mfrs. Ass'n v. White, 78 P.2d 572, 159 Or. 99.

(3) The trial court should have some discretion in passing on ques-

Other matters within the application of the general rules are the allowance or refusal of amendments;[21] laches, or the lapse of sufficient time to tion whether a cross action will be permitted in a declaratory judgment action, and its disposition of such question should not be disturbed on appeal unless it clearly appears that the trial court abused its discretion.

Failure to order judgment held error

However, where the evidence is insufficient to sustain verdict and it appears that there is no reasonable probability that the defects in the proof necessary to support verdict may be remedied on another trial, and that, on the whole record, the party against whom the verdict was rendered is entitled to judgment on the merits as a matter of law, the trial court, on motion, should order judgment notwithstanding the verdict, and failure to do so constitutes error subject to correction on appeal.

Bill or writ of review

(1) Whether leave shall be granted to file bill of review of final decree of superior court after rescript from supreme judicial court is matter within discretion of the superior

Substantial compliance with statute. If the case is one in which a requirement of the applicable statute has not been entirely disregarded, the determination by the trial court of the question of substantial compliance with the statute should be controlling in the absence of an abuse of discretion.[26.10]

b. What Constitutes Abuse of Discretion

In a legal sense, discretion is abused whenever, in its exercise, a court exceeds the bounds of reason in the circumstances, or exercises its discretion in violation of established or equitable principles. The fact that the appellate court would have decided otherwise does not establish an abuse of discretion.

There is no hard and fast rule by which to determine whether a court has abused its discretion.[26.50] In determining whether abuse of discretion is shown, the reviewing court construes the findings of the trial court in the light of the record.[26.55]

A reviewing court is never justified in substituting its discretion for that of the trial court;[26.60] in determining whether the lower court has abused its discretion, the question is not whether the reviewing court agrees with the court below, but, rather, whether it believes that a judicial mind, in view of the relevant rules of law applicable to the particular case and on due consideration of all the circumstances, could reasonably have reached the conclusion of the court below, of which complaint is made.[27] The mere fact that the appellate court would have decided otherwise does not establish that the discretion has been abused,[28] nor does a mere mistake or court, subject to review by supreme judicial court.

Mass.—City of Boston v. Santosuosso, 31 N.E.2d 564, 308 Mass. 189.

(2) The granting or denial of a petition for a writ of review rests substantially in the sound discretion of the court, the exercise of which will not be set aside unless positive error of law appears.

error of law;[29] but it has also been held that action taken by a court under a mistake of law and in conformity to such mistake,[29.5] or an erroneous holding of a trial court on a question of law,[29.10] is an abuse of discretion, that an abuse of discretion may amount to an error of law,[29.15] and that the term "abuse of discretion" indicates the opinion of the appellate court that there was commission of an error of law in the circumstances.[29.20]

An "abuse of discretion" does not necessarily imply a bad or improper motive, a wrong purpose, willfulness, prejudice, partiality, or an intentional wrong;[30] it is not ordinarily a term of approach,[30.5] and does not mean any reflection on the presiding judge of the lower court,[30.10] or carry with it an implication of conduct deserving of censure.[30.15]

In a legal sense, discretion is abused whenever, in its exercise, the court has acted arbitrarily without the employment of its conscientious judgment,[31] has exceeded the bounds of reason in view of all the circumstances,[32] or has so far ignored recognized rules or principles of law or practice as to

Honest opinion

An abuse of discretion on the part of the court may occur through an honest, although erroneous, opinion, entertained by the court as to the nature and extent of its discretionary power, and as to the legal principles governing its exercise; such abuse of discretion is as much reviewable as a willful abuse or intentional wrong.

result in substantial injustice.[33] Also, discretion is abused where manifest injustice has been done,[33.2] or substantial rights lost through mere technicalities,[33.4] or where the action of the court was so opposed to sound discretion as to amount to a deprivation of the rights of the complaining party,[33.6] or the decision of the court cannot reasonably be held to find support in the evidence.[33.8] The recognized test for an abuse of discretion has been held to be whether the court exercised its discretion on grounds, or for reasons, clearly untenable, or to an extent clearly unreasonable.[33.10] to be no abuse of discretion in the absence of a showing of prejudice.[37.25]

If, on the whole record, any doubt exists as to whether the discretion has been abused, the court below will not be reversed.[38]

§ 1585. Refusal to Exercise Discretion

If the trial court has improperly refused to exercise its discretionary power, the judgment will ordinarily be reversed so that the discretion shall be exercised; but in the absence of a showing to the contrary it will be presumed that the court exercised its discretion.

A test of an abuse of discretion has been held to be failure to exercise discretion.[38.50] If the trial court has refused or failed to exercise a discretion vested in it, as on the supposed ground of want of power, the judgment will generally be reversed to the end that the discretion shall be exercised,[39] unless there is no ground for the exercise of such discretion[40] or the trial court decides that, if it had the power to exercise its discretion, it would deny it.[41]

It has been held not to be orderly procedure for an appellate court to pass on the issue of proper exercise of discretion unless it appears that it has been exercised.[41.5] However, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, the appellate court will presume that the trial court exercised the discretion required of, or vested in, it by law;[42] and consideration of a matter by the court for even a few minutes may be enough to show that the matter was given attention and discretion exercised.[42.5] If it does not appear whether a ruling on a discretionary matter was made as a matter of discretion or a matter of law, it will be presumed that it was ruled on as a matter of discretion.[43]

2. QUESTIONS REVIEWABLE

a. Parties, Process, and Pleadings

§ 1586. Parties and Process

Discretionary action or ruling by the trial court with respect to parties or process will not be reviewed or revised except for clear abuse.

Unless a prejudicial abuse of discretion is clearly shown,[44] the appellate court generally will not review or revise the trial court's exercise of its discretionary powers with respect to parties[45] or process.[46] The party claiming that the trial court abused its discretion in ruling as to parties has the burden of affirmatively showing such abuse;[46.5] in the absence of such a showing, the appellate court will assume that the trial court exercised proper judicial discretion.[46.10]

Within the above rule are rulings on amendments as to parties,[47] joinder[47.5] or misjoinder[47.10] of parties, the bringing in or addition of new parties,[48]

Where a motion to amend a return is denied as a matter of law rather than as a matter of discretion, the question is reviewable by the appellate court.[51]

§ 1587(1). Pleadings

The exercise by the trial court of its discretionary powers as to pleadings will generally not be reviewed or revised unless a prejudicial abuse of discretion clearly appears.

As a general rule, an appellate court will not review or revise the exercise by the trial court of its discretionary powers in ruling on motions to make more specific and other matters relating to pleadings,[52] unless the fact that the party has been preju-

Reason for rule

Orders making additional parties defendant are usually discretionary and not reviewable, since it can rarely happen that making an additional party defendant will be prejudicial.
N.C.—Morgan v. Turnage Co., 196 S.E. 307, 213 N.C. 425.

Discretion held abused

(1) It is an abuse of discretion for a trial court to permit an additional party to be joined as plaintiff in an action, just as the case is called for trial, and to proceed immediately with the trial, over the objections of defendants, without giving them ample time to amend their pleadings and prepare their defense under the changed conditions.
Okl.—Fehlman v. Kinnear, 205 P. 1091, 85 Okl. 282.

(2) Under a statute providing that proper or necessary parties to a suit may be brought in, but not in a manner to delay the trial of the case unreasonably, if it appears that the trial court abused its discretion as to whether such delay is reasonable or unreasonable the appellate court will interfere.

Intervention as friend of court

Neb.—Anglim v. City of Omaha, 299 N.W. 353, 140 Neb. 147.

Intervention after final judgment

Generally, discretion of trial court will be exercised against granting intervention after final judgment, and if so exercised, will not be reviewed by appellate court.
Mich.—School Dist. of City of Ferndale v. Royal Oak Tp. School Dist. No. 8, 291 N.W. 199, 293 Mich. 1, 127 A.L.R. 661.

Where there is an absolute right to intervene, so that permission to do so is not discretionary with the court, an order refusing permission to intervene is reviewable by appeal.
Okl.—Morton v. Baker, 82 P.2d 998, 183 Okl. 406.

Change of issues; complication of case

Where intervention would change the issues or unduly complicate the case, refusal of leave to intervene is not ground for reversal, particularly if refusal does not deprive person seeking to intervene of a right of action.
Ill.—Town of Centreville v. Deckard, 53 N.E.2d 717, 322 Ill.App. 9.

Discretion held abused

In an action on a sheriff's bond for damages alleged to be caused by mismanagement of attached property, the court's refusal, without good reason, to permit the sheriff on his application and that of defendant surety company to become a party defendant, although not a necessary party, was an abuse of discretion reviewable on appeal.

Number of interveners

Discretion as to the number allowed to intervene in a proceeding affecting the general common interest, the number not materially adding to the costs, will not be interfered with.
Tex.—Tyree v. Road Dist. No. 5, Navarro County, Civ.App., 199 S.W. 644, error refused.

No question of law held presented

Denial of a petition to intervene, filed by stockholders of plaintiff corporation in suit by a lessee to restrain enforcement of lessor's judgment for possession of the premises, was held to present no question of law for review.

§ 1587(2). —— Amendment

a. In general
b. Subject matter or purpose of amendment
c. Time of amendment

a. In General

Rulings on amendments to pleadings will, in general, be disturbed on appeal only for abuse of the discretion of the trial court; the complaining party has the burden of showing such abuse.

The general rule, stated supra § 1587(1), that the exercise by the trial court of its discretionary powers as to pleadings will not be reviewed or revised in the absence of an abuse of discretion has been applied to amendments to pleadings,[55] includfault judgment, would not be disturbed by the supreme court on appeal, unless there was a clear showing of abuse of discretion.

Plea of statute of frauds

Permitting defendant to file plea of statute of frauds after complainant had testified was a matter within discretion of the chancellor, which would not be disturbed in absence of abuse of discretion.

"With few exceptions the action of the trial court in permitting or rejecting the amendments to pleadings will be approved."

Ky.—Culton v. Napier, 47 S.W.2d 519, 521, 242 Ky. 683.

Discretion not absolute but subject to review

W.Va.—Buffa v. Baumgartner, 58 S. E.2d 270, 133 W.Va. 753.

ing, under a number of decisions, pleadings in equity.[55.1] When a ruling on a motion to amend a pleading is presented for review, the question is not whether the judges of the reviewing court would have made an original like ruling,[55.2] but whether they believe that a judicial mind, in view of the law and the circumstances, could reasonably have reached that conclusion.[55.3]

So, rulings allowing or refusing amendments are subject to review or reversal only for, and will not be disturbed in the absence of, abuse of discretion,[55.4]

Exercise of discretion rarely disturbed

(1) Exercise of discretion by trial court in permitting or refusing to permit amendments to pleadings will rarely be revised or interfered with by appellate court.

Cal.—Jenssen v. R. K. O. Studios, 67 P.2d 757, 20 C.A.2d 705.

Ky.—Perros v. Stone's Adm'r, 202 S. W.2d 160, 305 Ky. 142.

Mo.—Uitz v. Pollard, App., 159 S.W. 2d 687.

Tenn.—Caccamisi v. Thurmond, App., 282 S.W.2d 633.

(2) Granting or refusing of leave to amend an answer is within sound discretion of trial court, which discretion will seldom be disturbed where exercised for purpose of allowing true facts to be alleged.

Cal.—Hyman v. Tarplee, 149 P.2d 453, 64 C.A.2d 805.

(3) Allowance or refusal of belated amendments to pleadings is so largely addressed to trial court's discretion that error can rarely be predicated thereon.

Kan.—Hirt v. Bucklin State Bank of Bucklin, 109 P.2d 171, 153 Kan. 194.

When substantial legal rights are involved, the appellate court not only has the power to review the action of the trial court in ruling on amendments to pleadings, but it is its duty to do so.

Iowa.—State v. Cordaro, 241 N.W. 448, 214 Iowa 1070.

Manner of exercising discretion

(1) The manner in which discretion of court in denying leave to amend answer is exercised is subject to review.

Ill.—Martin v. Kozjak, 125 N.E.2d 690, 5 Ill.App.2d 390.

(2) The discretion exercised by the trial court in preventing an amendment in pleadings is subject to review to determine whether there was some sound reason for trial court to exercise its discretion in that manner.

Conn.—Cook v. Lawlor, 90 A.2d 164, 139 Conn. 68.

(3) Amendment of a declaration or bill of complaint after appearance of defendant and before final judgment is a matter which rests in sound judicial discretion of the court, and manner in which such discretion is exercised is subject to appellate review.

W.Va.—Grottendick v. Webber, 52 S. E.2d 700, 132 W.Va. 539.

Plea in abatement

Cal.—Stewart v. San Fernando Refining Co., 71 P.2d 1118, 22 C.A.2d 661.

Arbitrary action

The reasonableness of time or opportunity to amend or to avail pleader of other procedure provided by statutes on a holding that a pleading does not state a claim or legal defense is peculiarly within discretionary province of trial court, and action of trial court in furtherance of such objectives will not be disturbed unless it is arbitrary.

Mo.—Gerber v. Schutte Inv. Co., 194 S.W.2d 25, 354 Mo. 1246.

Grant not required as matter of law

Mass.—Smith v. Miles, 5 N.E.2d 12, 296 Mass. 126.

Question of law

(1) The refusal of leave to amend bill of complaint rested in sound judicial discretion, and presented no question of law.

Mass.—Foster v. Shubert Holding Co., 55 N.E.2d 772, 316 Mass. 470.

(2) Refusal to permit amendment held to raise a question of law on appeal, and not to be a matter of judicial discretion.

Ill.—People ex rel. Anderson v. Chicago & E. I. R. Co., 78 N.E.2d 265, 399 Ill. 520.

Matter of right

Where the allowance of an amendment to pleading which at common law was discretionary becomes, by statute, a matter of right, the refusal of the right to amend is subject to review.

Pa.—Wessling v. Latkanich, 19 A.2d 553, 144 Pa.Super. 317.

Loss of right to jury trial

A finding that justice requires that an action at law for embezzlement be amended by a bill in equity for an accounting to ascertain the amount of indebtedness will not be set aside merely on ground that defendant thereby lost right to a jury trial of action at law.

However, it has been said: "Although the allowance of a legally permissible amendment is discretionary . . . questions of discretion are carried up on appeal in equity. . . . It does not follow, however, that in deciding them this court will give no weight to the way in which discretion was exercised by the court below."

4 C.J. p 800 note 54.

"The general rule is settled that amendment of the pleadings is a matter within the discretion of the court and not appealable; but that discretion is a judicial discretion to be exercised in accordance with the principle that a party charged is entitled to a reasonable opportunity to make his answer and present his defense, and when the court at the trial permits by amendment the substitution of a different cause of action and refuses to allow defendant reasonable time to prepare a defense appropriate to the new complaint, or to file a counterclaim in reduction of the damages claimed thereunder, legal error is committed which will be rectified on appeal."

Amendment necessary to prevent injustice

N.H.—Whitney v. H. P. Hood & Sons, 192 A. 493, 88 N.H. 483.

Compulsory amendment

(1) A ruling which grants or denies a motion for the compulsory amendment of a pleading is within the trial court's discretion, which will not be disturbed unless an abuse of discretion is shown or plainly appears.

Fla.—Brown v. Cosmopolitan Ice Co., 8 So.2d 400, 150 Fla. 599—Tampa Shipbuilding & Engineering Co. v. Thomas, 179 So. 705, 131 Fla. 650—Cook v. Hopkins, 124 So. 441, 98 Fla. 847—Holman v. 4 C.J. p 800 note 53.

(2) While the granting or denial of a motion for compulsory amendment is a matter resting within the discretion of the court, it is a discretion which must be exercised within the rules of good pleading, and is subject to review by the appellate court.

Fla.—Tampa Shipbuilding & Engineering Co. v. Thomas, 179 So. 705, 131 Fla. 650—Cook v. Hopkins, 124 So. 441, 98 Fla. 847.

Amendment of intervening petition

Mass.—Regan v. Tierney, 27 N.E.2d 698, 306 Mass. 168.

Sustaining demurrer without leave to amend

(1) In order to sustain action of trial court in sustaining a demurrer without leave to amend in a declaratory judgment action on ground that trial court was exercising its discretion to deny relief in such cases, it must appear, directly or indirectly, that such discretion was in fact exercised.

Cal.—Coruccini v. Lambert, 248 P.2d 457, 113 C.A.2d 486—Collins v. City & County of San Francisco, 247 P. 2d 362, 112 C.A.2d 719.

(2) Where formal order sustaining a demurrer without leave to amend in declaratory judgment action demonstrated that the denial of relief was based on the merits of controversy, order could not be sustained as constituting exercise of discretionary power of trial court in such actions to refuse to entertain jurisdiction.

Cal.—Collins v. City & County of San or, under other decisions, the erroneous or improper exercise of discretion,[55.5] the thwarting of justice,[55.6] or the deprivation of a fair trial;[55.7] the exercise of discretion will not be disturbed on appeal where it is apparent that the ends of justice have been promoted and that the parties have had a fair trial.[55.8] The decisions have variously required a showing of clear,[55.9] distinct,[55.10] gross,[55.11] or harmful abuse of discretion by the Francisco, 247 P.2d 362, 112 C.A.2d 719.

(3) Sustaining demurrer without leave to amend is an abuse of discretion if only sound basis of order is a defect challenged by special demurrer, and in such case the judgment will be reversed notwithstanding one or more grounds of special demurrer may have been good.

Cal.—Veterans' Welfare Bd. v. City of Oakland, 169 P.2d 1000, 74 C.A.2d 818.

(4) When an order is made sustaining a demurrer without leave to amend, question whether court abused its discretion is open on appeal, even though no request to amend was made.

Cal.—Johnston v. Long, 133 P.2d 409, 56 C.A.2d 834.

All facts within judicial knowledge

In passing on an alleged abuse of discretion in sustaining a general demurrer to complaint without leave to amend, all proper facts within judicial knowledge of court should be taken into consideration in determining whether complaint may be amended.

Cal.—Black Rock Placer Mining Dist. v. Summit Water & Irrigation Co., 133 P.2d 58, 56 C.A.2d 513.

Question raised

Refusal to permit filing of amended complaint in accordance with suggestion of the appellate court reversing judgment of dismissal raises the question of abuse of discretion properly considered on appeal.

Cal.—Hurley v. Lake County, 19 P.2d 26, 129 C.A. 615.

Refusal held abuse of discretion

Refusal to allow amendment to correspond with established and uncontroverted facts, proved by one party without objection and in accordance with testimony of the other, is an abuse of the trial court's discretion, warranting the intervention of the appellate court.

Iowa.—Cottong v. Zybell, 162 N.W. 767, 179 Iowa 1184.

Refusal held not abuse of discretion

(1) Generally.

Colo.—Fedderson v. Goode, 145 P.2d 981, 112 Colo. 38.

Ill.—Dean v. Kirkland, 23 N.E.2d 180, 301 Ill.App. 495.

N.J.—City of Bayonne v. Murphy & Perrett Co., 81 A.2d 485, 7 N.J. 298.

(2) As a matter of law.

Conn.—Burley v. Davis, 46 A.2d 417, 132 Conn. 631.

(3) Where plaintiff did not serve a proposed amendment or affidavit of merits.

Minn.—Nelson v. Auman, 13 N.W.2d 38, 216 Minn. 407.

(4) Refusal of trial court to permit insurance company at trial to amend answer which was of evasive character was not an abuse of discretion.

Ohio.—Williams v. Goodwin, 104 N.E. 2d 81, 90 Ohio App. 159.

(5) Where proposed amended complaint failed in the same respect as original to state facts sufficient to general rule that the refusal of a trial court to permit the amendment of pleadings on the trial is not an abuse of discretion reviewable by the reviewing court.[55.24] The burden of showing an abuse of discretion in allowing or refusing an amendment to a pleading rests on the party complaining,[55.25] and such abuse must affirmatively appear or be shown.[55.26] It will be presumed, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, that the discretion of the lower court with respect to amendments to pleadings was not abused,[55.27] and was exercised properly[55.28] and in furtherance of justice;[55.29] an abuse of discretion will not be presumed.[55.30]

Where the trial judge bases his refusal to allow an amendment on a want of power under the law, his judgment is reviewable.[55.31]

b. Subject Matter or Purpose of Amendment

The rule that discretionary rulings on amendments to pleadings will not be reviewed except for abuse of discretion has been applied to amendments dealing with various types of subject matter or offered for various purposes.

The rule that discretionary rulings on amendments to pleadings will not be reviewed except for abuse of discretion has been applied to amendments which add to, or change, the cause of action[55.40] or the defense,[55.41] amend pleadings which have already constitute a cause of action, the appellate court would not interfere with denial of motion to file proposed amended complaint.

Cal.—Wing v. Forest Lawn Cemetery Ass'n, 101 P.2d 1099, 15 C.2d 472, 130 A.L.R. 120.

Refusal held appealable
Where the amendment is of such a nature as to render a corresponding amendment necessary on the part of the adverse party, the refusal to allow the latter is appealable.
N.C.—Brooks v. Brooks, 90 N.C. 142—Gill v. Young, 88 N.C. 58.

55.24 "Something more than a request and a refusal . . . must appear before this court may say that the trial judge abused his discretion."

Sustaining demurrer without leave to amend
(1) Plaintiff has the burden of affirmatively showing an abuse of discretion before an order of the trial court sustaining a demurrer to a complaint without leave to amend will be disturbed on appeal.
Cal.—Powell v. Lampton, 85 P.2d 495, 30 C.A.2d 43.

(2) Burden held not sustained.

Pleading of limitations
Where complaint had anticipated defense of limitations, on appeal following refusal of trial court to allow defendant to amend his answer to make it comply with statute pertaining to pleading of limitations by remedying defendant's mechanical error in failing to specify the particular subdivision of admittedly proper sections of statute of limitations pleaded, plaintiff had burden of establishing that denial was in furtherance of justice.

trial court granting or denying motions by one or another of the parties for judgment on the pleadings.[64.5]

b. Provisional Remedies and Interlocutory or Other Proceedings before Trial

§ 1588. Provisional Remedies

The exercise, by the trial court, of its discretionary powers as to provisional remedies will not be reviewed except for clear abuse of discretion.

The exercise, by the trial court, of its discretionary powers with reference to provisional remedies will not be reviewed except for clear abuse of discretion.[65]

§ 1589. —— Arrest and Bail

An appellate court will interfere with the exercise, by a trial court, of discretion as to arrest or bail only in a case of clear abuse thereof.

(9) However, where motion to strike improper, irrelevant, or redundant matter from complaint was made within statutory period, movant was entitled to review of order overruling such motion as matter of right and not of judicial discretion.
N.C.—Patuxent Development Co. v. Bearden, 41 S.E.2d 85, 227 N.C. 124—Poovey v. City of Hickory, 188 S. E. 78, 210 N.C. 630.

Effect on substantial right; determining action

(1) Motion to strike rests in sound discretion of trial court, and rulings thereon are not appealable unless they affect a substantial right and in effect determine action.
Kan.—Krey v. Schmidt, 223 P.2d 1015, 170 Kan. 86—Estes v. J. A. Tobin Construction Co., 153 P.2d 939, 159 Kan. 322.

(2) Rulings on motions to strike ordinarily rest in sound discretion of the court and will not be considered on appeal unless the rulings in effect determine finally the results reached in the various actions.
Kan.—Giltner v. Stephens, 180 P.2d 288, 163 Kan. 37.

Motion as demurrer; demurrer as motion

(1) Treating a motion to strike answer as a demurrer and hearing it as such is so far within the trial court's discretion as hardly to be reviewable in any case, and certainly not unless for manifest abuse.
Wash.—Maltbie v. Gadd, 172 P. 557, 101 Wash. 483.

(2) A pleading denominated a special demurrer which challenges plaintiff's right merely to a portion of a cause of action may be treated as a motion to strike, addressed to sound discretion of court, and ordinarily refusal to grant it will not be disturbed unless it clearly appears that trial court's discretion has been abused.
Kan.—Krey v. Schmidt, 223 P.2d 1015, 170 Kan. 86.

Immaterial allegation

Error may not be predicated on action of trial court in overruling a motion to make more specific an immaterial allegation.
Ind.—Oliver v. Coffman, 45 N.E.2d 351, 112 Ind.App. 532.

Amended pleadings filed out of time

(1) The discretion of the trial court in striking or refusing to strike amended pleadings filed out of time is rarely interfered with by appellate court, and then only when trial court palpably abused such discretion.
Mo.—Bader v. Beck, App., 173 S.W. 2d 647.

(2) Amendment of pleadings generally see supra § 1587(2).

Charting course of trial

(1) Supreme court will not chart the course of the trial on motion to strike portions of the pleadings.
N.C.—Scarboro v. Morgan, 58 S.E. 2d 354, 231 N.C. 597.

(2) The supreme court, on appeal on close or attenuate motions to strike portions of the pleadings, does not chart the course of the trial.
N.C.—Parker v. Duke University, 55 S.E.2d 189, 230 N.C. 656.

Irrelevant or redundant matter; permission to replead

The power to strike from complaint, on motion made in apt time, should be exercised with caution, and, on appeal from order denying motion, supreme court should strike matter which is clearly irrelevant or redundant; an order, on defendant's motion, striking from complaint allegations of law inserted to preserve continuity of subjects dealt with, or by way of inducement or to show relation of defendants to specific requirements of law, would not be disturbed on appeal, where plaintiffs were given permission to replead.
N.C.—Hill v. Stansbury, 20 S.E.2d 308, 221 N.C. 339.

64.5 Ruling not within discretion of court

Where matters set forth in defendant's answer, if true, constituted a complete defense to plaintiff's claim, defendant was entitled to an opportunity to establish the truth of those matters as a matter of right, and to disregard them was not within the discretionary power of the court below, as against contention that the granting of plaintiff's motion for judgment on the pleadings was a ruling within the discretion of the court which should not be disturbed on exceptions.
Vt.—McCutcheon v. Leonard, 22 A. 2d 186, 112 Vt. 172.

65. Fla.—Florida Power Corporation v. Ocklawaha Reclamation Farms, 112 So. 616, 93 Fla. 740.
4 C.J. p 802 note 75.

The exercise, by a trial court, of its discretion in fixing the amount of an undertaking to obtain an order of arrest,[66] in continuing or vacating an order of arrest,[67] or with respect to the discharge, change, or reduction of bail,[68] will be reviewed or revised only on a clear showing of abuse. However, a limited statutory discretion with respect to the estreature or enforcement of bail bonds has been held subject to review and control by the appellate court.[69]

Bail trover. The inability of an applicant for discharge from jail on his own recognizance in a bail trover case to give the required security or to produce the personalty involved is a question for the trial judge, whose determination will not be disturbed unless it is affirmatively shown to be a manifest abuse of his discretion.[69.5] The finding of the trial judge against such an application cannot be held, on appeal, to be an abuse of discretion as a matter of law, if it is supported by any competent evidence and no error of law appears.[69.10]

§ 1590. —— Attachment and Garnishment

The determination of discretionary matters by a trial court as to attachment or garnishment is subject to review only for abuse of discretion.

It is only for manifest or clear abuse that an appellate court will review or revise the exercise, by a trial court, of its discretionary powers in ruling on an application for an attachment,[69.50] with respect to the dissolution of an attachment,[70] the correction of an irregularity in the signing of an attachment,[71] the revocation of an order directing the attaching creditor to pay a chattel mortgage,[72] or the determination of the fees to which an attaching officer is entitled;[73] but the refusal to grant an attachment, amounting to an abuse of discretion, may be reviewed.[74]

Likewise, the appellate court will review only for abuse of discretion the determination by the trial court of discretionary matters in garnishment proceedings,[75] such as the quashing of the garnishment,[76] the making of an order requiring a garnishee to pay money attached into court,[77] the sub-

In Pennsylvania

(1) Under statute relating to appeals in writs of foreign attachment, record must present a plain case of abuse of discretion before a reversal may be had.
Pa.—Badler v. L. Gillarde Sons Co., 127 A.2d 680, 387 Pa. 266.

(2) "The Pennsylvania authorities, down to certain recent cases . . . held consistently that the determination of an application either to quash the writ or to dissolve an attachment was not reviewable, because it was a matter within the discretion of the court below, and, since no bill of exceptions lay to bring the evidence relating thereto upon the record, the practical effect of this was that such discretion could not be reviewed. . . . The act of April 26, 1917 (P.L. 102; Pa.St.1920, §§ 514-516), expressly allows 'appeals from orders of court entered on motions to quash or dissolve writs of foreign attachment,' and provides that 'the evidence on which the case was heard and disposed of in the court below, together with the opinion of the court thereon, shall constitute a part of the record'; further, that the appellate court shall consider the evidence and opinion brought before it and 'dispose of the case according as the law and the facts shall be found therefrom.' See, also, the General Act of April 18, 1919 (P.L. 72; Pa.St.1920, § 553), making the testimony part of the record in all appellate proceedings. Under this legislation, we examine the proofs to see whether there is any evidence to warrant the findings of the trial court, or to sustain the action complained of . . . but, in making such examination, the prevailing presumption 'that everything was done rightly and according to law' . . . still holds, and, since the act of 1917 allows an appeal (like the one before us) from the refusal to quash a writ, which is an interlocutory order, the usual rule governing appeals from such orders applies, and the record must present plainly a clear abuse of discretion before a reversal can be had."

§ 1591. —— Injunctions

Discretionary rulings by a trial court with respect to injunctions will not be reviewed or revised except for manifest abuse; the question on review is whether the court abused its discretion.

Generally, in the absence of manifest abuse of discretion or of a clear showing of abuse, an appellate court will not review, modify, or revise discretionary actions of the trial court in passing on an application for an injunction or restraining order,[81.50] or discretionary rulings as to the grant or refusal thereof.[82] The same principle applies with

Effect of denial under oath of allegations

Merely because material allegations of the petition were denied under oath will not justify the reversal of a judgment granting a temporary injunction, in the absence of an abuse of discretion.

Tex.—City of Dallas v. Atkins, Civ. App., 197 S.W. 593, affirmed 223 S. W. 170, 110 Tex. 627.

Hearing oral testimony

The court's exercise of discretion in hearing oral testimony in determining whether or not to issue a temporary injunction will not be disturbed, unless that discretion was abused.

Tex.—Harding v. W. L. Pearson & Co., Com.App., 48 S.W.2d 964.

Whole record

Action of court on right to, and necessity for, granting or refusal of interlocutory injunction will not be disturbed on appeal unless from whole record it appears that there was an abuse of discretion.

Preservation or destruction of status quo

(1) Issue to be determined on appeal from pendente lite injunctive order as to easement is whether trial judge abused his discretion in preserving status quo as of date on which controversy arose.

Tex.—Richter v. Hickman, Civ.App., 243 S.W.2d 466.

(2) Primary question is whether chancellor abused his discretion in its issuance, and whether injunction destroys, rather than preserves, the status quo.

Ill.—Gillam v. 661 Sheridan Apartments, Inc., 116 N.E.2d 91, 1 Ill. App.2d 11.

Date of determination

(1) In determining propriety of order granting temporary injunction without notice or bond, appellate court will not consider affidavits supporting complaint or any proceeding subsequent to granting of injunction, but will judge order on pleadings as they existed when order was entered; whether any harm to defendant from issuance of temporary injunction without bond was judge's place.[88.10] In determining whether a trial court abused its discretion, an appellate court will consider the answer along with other evidence.[88.15]

The discretion exercised by the trial court is, however, a legal or judicial one which is subject to review for abuse or improper exercise,[89] as where there has been a violation of some established rule of law or principle of equity,[90] or a clear misapprehension of the controlling law[90.5] or of the cured by plaintiff's filing of bond when defendant's motion to dissolve injunction was denied cannot be considered by appellate court, as question whether injunction issued improvidently must be determined as of date of issuance thereof.

Ill.—Lee v. Morris, 62 N.E.2d 573, 326 Ill.App. 555.

(2) Where motion of defendant to dissolve temporary injunction directly attacked issuance of injunction without notice, appellate court would not consider any pleadings or proceedings subsequent to granting of injunction and would judge injunctive order on pleadings as they existed at time order was entered.

Discretion not arbitrary
Ala.—Lybrand v. Town of Pell City, 71 So.2d 797, 260 Ala. 534.

"Abuse of discretion" warranting interference by appellate court is an abuse "so plain that upon consideration of the facts upon which the trial judge acted, an unprejudiced person can say that there was no justification or excuse for the ruling made."
Mich.—Seifert v. Buhl Optical Co., 268 N.W. 784, 276 Mich. 692—Furniture Mfrs.' Ass'n of Grand Rapids v. Grand Rapids Guild of Exhibitors, 256 N.W. 595, 597, 268 Mich. 685.

To establish that the trial court abused its discretion in refusing an injunction "it is necessary for appellants to here show that they not only both alleged and proved every essential element to a cause of action for the injunctive relief they sought, but also that they likewise negatived all reasonable inferences of the existence of other facts under which they might not have been entitled to such relief."
Tex.—Scanlan v. Houston Lighting & Power Co., Civ.App., 62 S.W.2d 537, 539.

Questions for review
In suit by wife to enjoin another woman from alienating affections of wife's husband, judicial discretion of trial judge was subject to review by the supreme court, not merely on question of jurisdiction, but also on expediency and sound policy.
Ala.—Henley v. Rockett, 8 So.2d 852, 243 Ala. 172.

Test of abuse of discretion
Abuse of discretion in granting or refusing temporary injunction may be found only when record reflects that findings necessary to sustain order are not supported by some evidence of a substantial and probative character.
Tex.—City of Houston v. Southwestern Bell Tel. Co., Civ.App., 263 S.W.2d 169, error refused.

Test of propriety of action
Propriety of action of trial court is to be determined from probability of right and probability of injury thereto if the injunction is not granted, as shown by the pleadings and evidence addressed to those questions.

4 C.J. p 804 notes 89, 90, 92.

"The trial court's discretion is not unlimited and does not extend to the erroneous application of the law to undisputed facts. If the facts are such that solely questions of law are presented, the trial court's action is reviewable, and should be reviewed on appeal. Differently stated, the trial court abuses its discretion when it fails or refuses to apply the law to conceded or undisputed facts."

facts,[91] or the judgment rendered by the court is clearly against the weight of the evidence;[91.5] and, where an abuse of discretion is clearly made to appear, the appellate court will reverse the order or decree.[92] Moreover, the general rule forbidding the review of discretionary rulings on injunctions does not apply where the trial court does not base its decision on a discretionary matter but expressly rests it on a point of law.[93]

Requirement of bond. In accordance with the general rule as to the review of the granting of an injunction, an order of the trial court, requiring a bond to be given on the granting of an injunction, will not be disturbed in the absence of a clear abuse of discretion,[93.5] and it will be presumed that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in ordering the filing of a bond in a certain amount, where there is nothing in the record whereby an appellate court can determine whether the amount was excessive.[93.10]

§ 1592. —— Receivers

The determination by a lower court of discretionary matters in connection with receiverships will be reviewed by an appellate court only for the manifest abuse of discretion.

Unless some principle of substantial equity has been violated,[93.50] it is only for clear or manifest abuse of discretion that an appellate court will review or interfere with the lower court's exercise of its discretionary powers with respect to the appointment of a receiver;[94] this principle applies

Receiver for trust property

Chancellor's findings with respect to propriety of receivership for trust property will not ordinarily be disturbed on appeal.
Fla.—Harvey v. City of St. Petersburg, 189 So. 861, 138 Fla. 597, certiorari denied 60 S.Ct. 131, 308 U. S. 596, 84 L.Ed. 499—Smith v. Fleetwood Building Corp., 163 So. 293, 120 Fla. 481—Douglas Properties v. Stix, 159 So. 1, 118 Fla. 354.

Refusal to appoint receiver

(1) Generally.
Cal.—Golden State Glass Corporation v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County, 90 P.2d 75, 13 C.2d 384.
Fla.—Wilkins v. Wilkins, 198 So. 335, 144 Fla. 590.
Okl.—Whisman v. Missouri State Life Ins. Co., 97 P.2d 1, 186 Okl. 261—Boynton Gas & Electric Co. v. Mosier, 65 P.2d 448, 179 Okl. 232.

(2) Supreme court will not disturb ruling of trial judge in refusing to appoint receiver of corporation unless it clearly appears that interests of minority stockholders are in imminent danger, particularly where the parties have full and adequate remedy through other means.
La.—Peiser v. Grand Isle, Inc., 60 So.2d 1, 198 La. 585.

Abuse of discretion

(1) The appellate court will reverse the appointment of a receiver if it is of the opinion that the lower court's discretion has been abused.
Cal.—California Delta Farms v. Chinese American Farms, 269 P. 443, 204 C. 524.
Fla.—Apalachicola Northern R. Co. v. Sommers, 85 So. 361, 79 Fla. 816.

(2) "Abuse of discretion" is a discretion exercised to an end or purpose not justified by, and clearly against, reason and evidence.
Ohio.—Wilgus v. Arthur, 53 N.E.2d 197, 72 Ohio App. 511.

(3) Although discretion will not be disturbed on appeal in doubtful cases, yet, when it is determined from examination of application and evidence favorable to plaintiff that there has been no cause either alleged or proved for appointment of a receiver, the order must be reversed on appeal.
Ind.—Indianapolis Dairymen's Co-op. v. Bottema, 79 N.E.2d 399, 226 Ind. 237.

(4) If court, in appointing receiver for corporation, departs from or misapplies the law, or judgment exercised is manifestly unreasonable as shown by evidence on record, court's discretion is abused, and it is duty of reviewing court to correct the error.
Pa.—Com. ex rel. Truscott v. Yiddisher Kultur Farband, 116 A.2d 555, 382 Pa. 553.

Fitness of person appointed

The trial court's discretion in selecting the person appointed as receiver will not be disturbed because of unfitness of the receiver unless some objection appears which is overwhelming in propriety or fatal on principle.

to the appointment of a temporary,[94.5] or a pendente lite,[94.10] receiver.

Postponement of hearing on application

The appellate court will not reverse the trial court's action in postponing hearing on an application for appointment of a receiver in a mortgage foreclosure suit until after the foreclosure decree and execution sale, unless an abuse of discretion is shown.
Iowa.—First Trust Joint Stock Land Bank of Chicago v. Schmidt, 244 N. W. 866, 215 Iowa 103.

Provisional receiver in foreclosure

The appointment of a provisional receiver in a foreclosure proceeding on statutory ground that the property was insufficient to discharge the debt would not be disturbed, where the trial court heard the evidence, judged the credibility of the witnesses and the weight to be given their testimony, and found that the appointment of the receiver was justiciable, since the appointment of the receiver was largely a matter of discretion of the trial court.
Tex.—Bean v. Peurifoy, Civ.App., 75 S.W.2d 489.

Stipulation for appointment

Even when stipulated for by the parties, the appointment of a receiver rests in the equity court's sound discretion, subject to appellate review when abused.
Fla.—Carolina Portland Cement Co. v. Baumgartner, 128 So. 241, 99 Fla. 987.

Weight of evidence

In determining whether a receiver has been properly appointed, the supreme court will not interfere with the trial court's discretion on the mere weight of evidence.
Wash.—Draper v. J. G. Robinson Lettuce Farms, 2 P.2d 661, 164 Wash. 8.

Conflicting evidence

(1) Where evidence is conflicting, proof of actual partnership, that business is insolvent, and that assets are being wasted or misappropriated, are matters entirely for trial court, with respect to appointment of receiver.
Cal.—Baldwin v. Baldwin, 153 P.2d 567, 67 C.A.2d 175.

(2) If it appears that party seeking appointment of a receiver has at least a probable right or interest in the property involved and that there is danger of its being lost, destroyed, or misappropriated, and on conflicting testimony such right or interest and danger are found to exist, a reviewing court generally is in no position to say that a nisi prius court has abused its discretion in the appointment of a receiver.
Cal.—Armbrust v. Armbrust, 171 P. 2d 75, 75 C.A.2d 272—Whitley v. Bradley, 110 P. 596, 18 C.A. 720.

(3) Where it appears that there is danger of misappropriation of property, and evidence is conflicting as to likelihood of loss, reviewing court is in no position to say that court below has abused its discretion in appointment of receiver.
Cal.—Sibert v. Shaver, 247 P.2d 609, 113 C.A.2d 19.

(4) Ordinarily, where a receiver has been appointed on a finding based on conflicting evidence that danger is threatened to property or funds, reviewing court will not hold that trial court has abused its discretion.
Cal.—Breedlove v. J. W. & E. M. Breedlove Excavating Co., 132 P.2d 239, 56 C.A.2d 141.

(5) In suit involving appointment of receiver, discretion of trial judge is so broad that his order based on facts concerning which reasonable minds might differ with respect to necessity for receivership will not be reversed.
Cal.—Armbrust v. Armbrust, supra—Moore v. Oberg, 142 P.2d 443, 61 C.A.2d 216.

Question for review; test

(1) Generally.

Tex.—Jones v. Springer, Civ.App., 256 S.W.2d 1016.

(2) To justify interference with appointment of receiver, it must clearly appear that order was arbitrary exercise of power.
Cal.—Armbrust v. Armbrust, 171 P.2d 75, 75 C.A.2d 272—Moore v. Oberg, 142 P.2d 443, 61 C.A.2d 216—Breedlove v. J. W. & E. M. Breedlove Excavating Co., 132 P.2d 239, 56 C.A.2d 141.

(3) Since power to appoint receiver for a corporation ex parte lies in superior court, question on appeal is not one of jurisdiction, but of error, and as such is limited to inquiry whether trial court abused its discretion.

Sale of property

(1) An order for the sale of receivership property will not be disturbed by the appellate court in the absence of an abuse of discretion.

Mass.—Plumer v. Houghton & Dutton Co., 178 N.E. 716, 277 Mass. 209—Boucher v. Hamilton Mfg. Co., 156 N.E. 424, 259 Mass. 259.

(2) Also, the confirmation or setting aside of a sale is a discretionary matter on which the lower court will not be disturbed in the absence of abuse.

Okl.—Fernow v. Watts, 44 P.2d 24, 172 Okl. 128—First Nat. Bank v. Colonial Trust Co., 167 P. 985, 66 Okl. 106.

(3) Reviewing court will not disturb acts of plaintiff's attorney as receiver, appointed on parties' agreement, in selling properties involved to plaintiff in manner authorized and later confirmed by trial court, in absence of contention that plaintiff paid inadequate price, that properties would bring more at another sale, that any collusion or fraud was practiced, that receiver did not act in good faith in obtaining best possible price, that sale was had without written notice by registered mail to appellant, or that sale was confirmed without proper notice.

Review of discretion of trial court as to fees of attorneys generally see infra § 1636.

"The fundamental rule is that the amount lies in the discretion of the receiver's employees.[3]

§ 1593. Depositions

Discretionary action of the trial court with respect to depositions is reviewable only in case of an abuse of its discretion.

Discretionary action of the trial court in connection with the taking or suppression of depositions is ordinarily reviewable only in case of palpable abuse of its discretion,[4] or where substantial rights have been prejudiced.[4.5] This rule is applicable to the action of a trial judge in permitting the deposition to be admitted instead of requiring the witness, who was in court pursuant to a subpoena, to be placed on the stand.[4.10]

It has been held, however, that where there are no circumstances better known to the trial court than to the appellate court, it is the duty of the latter to review a decision excluding a deposition.[5]

§ 1594. Discovery

The exercise by the trial court of its discretionary powers with respect to discovery or examination before trial will be reviewed only for manifest abuse of its discretion.

The exercise by the trial court of its discretionary powers in granting or denying an order for discovery or examination before trial,[6] vacating a no-court, having regard to all the circumstances; that the action of the court is presumptively correct, and will be upheld if it does not plainly appear that there has been an abuse of discretion."

tice of examination before trial,[7] or prescribing the scope of the examination,[8] will be reviewed or interfered with only if there has been an abuse of discretion. Accordingly, where the discretion of the trial court is improvidently exercised in limiting the scope of an examination before trial, the action will be reversed on appeal.[8.5]

One appealing from an order denying him the right to inspect papers or machines has the burden of proving that the trial court abused its discretion.[8.10]

§ 1595. —— Physical Examination

Discretionary rulings of the trial court in connection with an application for the physical examination of plaintiff in an action for personal injuries will be reviewed or corrected only for abuse of discretion.

Unless there has been an abuse of discretion,[9] an appellate court ordinarily will not review or correct the trial court's discretionary action in permitting, compelling, or refusing to compel the physical examination of plaintiff in a suit for personal injuries,[10] or in selecting experts to make the ex-

Matters considered to determine abuse

(1) "The age and sex of the person who is the subject of the examination, and the nature and character of the examination involved, will all be considered by the appellate tribunal in determining whether the trial court has abused its discretion in a given case."

Ind.—Kokomo, M. & W. Traction Co. v. Walsh, 108 N.E. 19, 24, 58 Ind. App. 182.

(2) Delay in filing a motion for the physical examination of plaintiff until evidence as to her injuries, secured by physicians from an examination of her person, had been presented in her behalf at the trial should be considered in determining whether the trial court abused its discretion in overruling defendant's motion.

Ind.—Kokomo, M. & W. Traction Co. v. Walsh, supra.

In Tennessee the decision of the trial court in either granting or disallowing an application for the physical examination of plaintiff "is subject to review on appellate proceedings, and the revising court, being furnished with the grounds of his ac-amination.[11] The burden rests on appellant to prove that the trial court abused its discretion in denying his motion for a physical examination.[11.5]

§ 1596. Dismissal or Nonsuit before Trial

Discretionary rulings, made before trial, granting or denying a dismissal or nonsuit, or reinstatement of the cause after dismissal or nonsuit, will be reviewed or reversed only in case of abuse of discretion.

Unless the discretion vested in the trial court has been abused or arbitrarily exercised,[12] or its ruling results in a clear error of law,[13] an appellate court will not review or reverse a discretionary ruling of the trial court granting or denying a dismissal or nonsuit, before trial,[14] or granting or denying a tion, preserved in the record or by bill of exceptions, together with his conclusions and reasons therefor, will be able likewise to exercise an intelligent discretion, either in affirmance or reversal of the trial court's action."

Discontinuance

Where plaintiff, while his actions on certain notes were pending in a magistrate's court, sued in the circuit court thereon, and defendant set up a defense and a counterclaim, the amount of which was within the jurisdiction of the magistrate's court, the granting of plaintiff's motion to discontinue his suit in the circuit court was within the discretion of such court, and would not be interfered with on appeal, where defendant was not prejudiced by the discontinuance.

S.C.—Langley v. Stokes, 90 S.E. 31, 105 S.C. 429.

Dismissal of equity cause without prejudice

Where the dismissal of an equity cause without prejudice is refused on the proper application of the rule requiring discretion on part of court to avoid prejudice to defendant, as where he has entitled himself to affirmative relief, or to a hearing and reinstatement of the cause after a dismissal or nonsuit.[15] An order dismissing an action because of the lapse of more than a certain period of time since it was commenced cannot be affirmed as being within the discretionary power of the trial court, where the motion on which the order is based was addressed to the mandatory power of the court.[15.5]

§ 1597. Reference

Ordinarily, the exercise by the trial court of its discretionary powers as to the grant or conduct of a reference, the acceptance or rejection of the referee's report, or recommitment thereof will be reviewed only for an abuse of discretion.

Unless it has been abused or erroneously exercised,[16] the exercise by the trial court of its discretion in granting or refusing to grant an order of reference will not be reviewed or interfered with.[17] This is also true with respect to the discretionary disposition on the merits, etc., the ruling will not be disturbed.

Abuse determined from pleadings

Erroneous conception of law

Although refusal of compulsory reference is largely within the discretion of judge, his action is reviewable when based on an erroneous conception of law, it being in such case technically an "abuse of discretion."

Reference to take testimony

Where specific performance is sought, a chancellor will not be held in error for requiring testimony to be taken on complicated matters of fact presented for decision on bill action of the court in appointing a special master in place of a disqualified master,[17.5] accepting or rejecting the referee's report,[18] granting or denying a motion to set aside an order confirming the report of a special commissioner,[18.5] to recommit the report of a referee, master, auditor, or commissioner,[19] or to reopen the case for the receipt of additional evidence,[20] extending the time for taking testimony before a master,[21] or approving the amount of an auditor's[22] or master's[22.5] fee.

The discretion of commissioners in allotting shares in a partition proceedings will not be disturbed by the appellate court in the absence of an affirmative showing of abuse of discretion,[23] such as a mistake and answers and exceptions to the answer when no abuse of discretion appears.

Overruling exceptions to auditor's report in equity

Where an equity case has been referred to an auditor and exceptions of fact are filed to his report, the approval or disapproval of the exceptions to the findings of the auditor upon the facts is within the discretion of the court, and the exercise of that discretion will not be interfered with unless manifestly abused.
Ga.—Christian v. Bremer, 34 S.E.2d 40, 199 Ga. 285—Parsons v. Fox, 176 S.E. 642, 179 Ga. 615—Crim v. Alston, 151 S.E. 807, 169 Ga. 852—Broderick v. Reid, 139 S.E. 18, 164 Ga. 474—Bacon v. Bacon, 133 S.E. 512, 161 Ga. 978.

Report set aside for legal reasons

Where it affirmatively appears that an order setting aside a referee's report was not granted in the exercise of the discretion of the court but for reasons specified in the order itself, an appeal from the order presents a legal question and the discretion of the trial court is not involved.

Order modified

Where master's report was recommitted with directions to report evidence and make subsidiary findings, and he failed to comply, but report after recommittal was confirmed, supreme judicial court could not enforce compliance.
Mass.—Bumpus v. Church, 19 N.E. 2d 716, 302 Mass. 419.

Review or reversal for abuse of discretion

(1) "The question of recommitting a report of referees is addressed to the discretion of the court, and it has been held in some cases that an order to recommit is not open to exceptions. . . . That statement of the rule is too broad. The discretionary power of the court to recommit reports of referees for further consideration 'must be exercised judicially, and upon consideration of the facts and circumstances of the case.' . . . And it is well settled that judicial discretion must be exercised soundly according to the well-established rules of practice and procedure, a discretion guided by the law so as to work out substantial equity and justice. It is magisterial, not personal discretion. When some palpable error has been committed or an apparent injustice has been done, the ruling is reviewable on exceptions. . . . It is when judicial discretion is exercised in accordance with this rule that it is final and conclusive."
Me.—Bourisk v. Mohican Co., 175 A. 345, 346, 133 Me. 207.

(2) A reviewing court has the power to remand the case to have a recommittal ordered in exceptional cases where injustice would result from disposing of the case on the report of the referee as made.
Vt.—Van Dyke v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 78 A. 958, 84 Vt. 212, Ann.Cas. 1913A 640.

Rule inapplicable

"It is a general rule that a motion to recommit an auditor's report rests in the judicial discretion of the court and its decision is not subject to exception. Where, however, as in the case at bar, the findings of the auditor are agreed to be final, the general rule is not applicable; in such cases the auditor's rulings on the admission of evidence are reviewable on a motion to recommit for alleged errors. If the motion is denied, the party aggrieved may have the order reversed by this court."

22. Pa.—Moats v. Thompson, 129 A. 105, 283 Pa. 313.

22.5 Allowance in gross

Where several accounts of trustees are separately referred to same master, necessitating separate reports by master on each account, and one or more of the accounts require different types of professional service, in absence of evidence of, and findings determining, value of services rendered by master on each reference and respective values of different types of professional service necessarily performed with respect to each account, this court is not in a position to determine whether an allowance in gross is excessive.

§ 1598. Change of Venue

Discretionary rulings of a trial court on applications for change of venue will be reviewed or reversed only for clear abuse or legal error.

Although the action of the trial court on a motion or application for change of venue may be subject to review and reversal because of an abuse of discretion,[27] or for legal error,[28] it is well settled that the exercise, by a trial court, of discretionary power to grant or deny a change of venue will not be reviewed or reversed in the absence of a clear showing of abuse.[29] This general rule has been ap-

Abuse in refusing change to defendant pleading no defense

Fact that defendant pleaded no defense and that the trial court erred in overruling exceptions to answer, is no ground for not reversing for abuse of discretion in denying defendant a change of venue, since, if exceptions had been sustained, defendant might have amended to meet points raised.
Tex.—Trammell v. Currie, Civ.App., 261 S.W. 827.

Burden of showing abuse of discretion rests on the party complaining of the action of the trial court in granting or denying a change of venue.

Questions for review

(1) A decision on motion for change of venue is reviewable only to extent of inquiring whether evidence adduced at hearing does not as a matter of law justify decision of the court and whether trial court abused its discretion.

Cal.—People v. Ocean Shore R. R., 75 P.2d 560, 24 C.A.2d 420.

(2) On an appeal from an order denying motion for change of venue, supreme court does not try issue anew, but determines whether trial judge abused his discretion by making a manifest error of law so opposed to a sound discretion as to amount to a deprivation of legal rights of moving party.

S.C.—O'Shields v. Caldwell, 37 S.E. 2d 665, 208 S.C. 245.

Sufficiency of notice

Extent of review

District court of appeal may review such ruling only to extent of inquiring whether it constitutes an abuse of such discretion.

Burden of proof

The district court of appeal cannot say that trial court has abused its discretion in determining whether change of venue should be granted on ground that an impartial trial cannot be had in county in which action has been commenced, unless it clearly appears that the evidence adduced at hearing on motion for change of venue does not, as matter of law, justify determination by trial court, and burden of pointing out such deficiency is on party appealing from determination.

Joint defendants
(1) It has been held, however, that in no case will the appellate court approve the action of the trial court in permitting a severance of the action, where defendants are sued jointly for a tort, unless it is affirmatively made to appear of record that the order was properly allowed.
Ky.—Hutchison v. Ohio Valley Electric Ry. Co., 209 S.W. 355, 357, 183 Ky. 396.

(2) "To hold otherwise would, it seems to us, deprive the plaintiff of the right of election, given him by the law to sue the joint wrongdoers jointly or severally and yet give the latter the right to elect, to their advantage in every instance, to have separate trials."
Ky.—Hutchison v. Ohio Valley Electric Ry. Co., supra.

(3) Where separate trials to defendants jointly sued for tort have been granted, judgment will not be reversed merely because of severance where it is manifest that substantial rights of none of parties were prejudiced.
Ky.—Malcolm v. Poland, 126 S.W.2d 1098, 277 Ky. 512.

Time after issue joined
Fixing case for trial three days after issue was joined over objection of defendant requires reversal of judgment.
La.—Alford v. Glenn, App., 185 So. 720.

Change of date set by clerk
Where no abuse of discretion is shown, a judgment will not be reversed because the court of its own motion set a case for trial at a later date than that on which it was set by the clerk of the court in making up the trial docket or because the court, of its own motion, reset a case for a later date in the term.

Waiver of jury trial
Denial of defendant's motion to be relieved of his neglect in waiving trial by jury cannot be disturbed on appeal unless it is established that he made timely application to be relieved of such neglect and that trial court grossly abused its discretion in denying application.

(2) Ordinarily the appellate division will not interfere with exercise of discretion by judge in denying application for two-year advance of case on tort calendar.
N.Y.—Fitzgerald v. South Norwalk Trust Co., 149 N.Y.S.2d 355, 1 A.D. 2d 822.

§ 1600. Continuance

Discretionary rulings of the trial court with respect to the grant or denial of continuances will be reviewed or revised only for prejudicial abuse of discretion or for legal error.

A ruling on a motion for a continuance may be reversed for legal error,[36] and any discretion that the trial court may have with reference to such a motion is a legal one subject to review and revision for prejudicial abuse,[37] particularly when the continuance statute has been complied with in every way;[37.5] the discretion of the trial court is not absolute or arbitrary.[37.10] However, it is more generally held that a motion or application for a continuance or postponement is addressed to the discretion of the trial court, and that its grant or refusal thereof will not be reviewed or reversed if no abuse is shown,[38] some authorities also requiring,

(3) Exercise of discretion by court in granting preference of trial in "interests of justice" should not be disturbed merely because it is deemed to have been improvident.
N.Y.—Bernstein v. Strammiello, 120 N.Y.S.2d 490, 202 Misc. 823.

(4) Where facts alleged were not sufficient to justify, on ground of indigence, preference in trial, granting of preference was improvident exercise of discretion, and would be reversed.
N.Y.—Roberts v. Ellis, 107 N.Y.S.2d 272, 279 App.Div. 597.

(5) In action for infant's injuries, order granting plaintiffs' motion for preference was improvident exercise of discretion requiring a reversal.

Arbitrary or capricious refusal
Discretion of trial court to grant or refuse a continuance must be exercised judiciously and not arbitrarily or capriciously, and arbitrary or capricious refusal of continuance will justify a reversal.
Ill.—Heideman v. Kelsey, 121 N.E.2d 45, 3 Ill.App.2d 189.

Compelling trial without party or attorney
(1) Where rights of party have been sacrificed, as when defendant's attorney was forced to go to trial without him, he being a necessary witness, the supreme court will review the exercise of discretion of the trial court in the matter of continuance.
Ark.—Ashworth v. Brickey, 195 S.W. 682, 129 Ark. 295.

(2) Where during the progress of a trial the attorney for one of the parties is stricken with a serious illness, and this attorney's law clerk appears and moves the court for a postponement or that the case be stricken from the day's assignment, and the record is uncontroverted in showing that the stricken attorney is the only person familiar with the facts and the theory of the case represented by him, and is the only one who has prepared to try the case, the overruling of such motion and requiring such attorney's law clerk to proceed with the trial is a denial of the right of the party litigant to be represented by counsel of his own choosing, and is such an abuse of judicial discretion as to require correction by this court.

Review of grant of recess or adjournment pending trial see infra § 1603.

"It is not enough that if the application for a continuance had been presented to us we might have felt inclined to grant it. On appeal we must go further, and find as a matter of law that the district court, in view of the facts and circumstances disclosed by the record, abused the discretion which the law has conferred upon it, and which the law wisely withholds from us. We cannot exercise original discretion in such cases, but all we may do is to determine as a matter of law whether the district court has abused its discretion."

Utah.—Van Cott v. Wall, 178 P. 42, 48, 53 Utah 282.

Reason for rule

Judge observes and knows surrounding facts and circumstances, and hence is in better position than appellate court to determine whether design of party making motion for continuance is delay, or whether continuance is essential to fair and impartial trial.

Va.—Miller v. Grier S. Johnson, Inc., 62 S.E.2d 870, 191 Va. 768.

Second motion

Tex.—Kramer v. Crout, Civ.App., 279 S.W.2d 932, error refused no reversible error.

Presumptions and burden of proof

(1) An abuse of discretion will not be presumed.

Wash.—Calhoun, Denny & Ewing v. Quinlan, 150 P. 1132, 86 Wash. 547.

(2) Decision of trial court on a motion for a continuance is presumed to be proper.

Tex.—Texas Indem. Ins. Co. v. Harlan, Civ.App., 236 S.W.2d 564, error dismissed—Dittmar v. St. Louis Union Trust Co., Civ.App., 155 S.W.2d 388, error refused.

(3) Where motion for continuance does not comply with rule relating thereto, presumption is court did not abuse its discretion in refusing a continuance.

Tex.—Jinks v. Jinks, Civ.App., 205 S.W.2d 816.

(4) When continuance rule has been complied with, there is no presumption that court did not abuse its discretion.

Tex.—Piedmont Fire Ins. Co. v. Dunlap, Civ.App., 193 S.W.2d 853, error refused no reversible error—United Employers Cas. Co. v. McCloud, Civ.App., 146 S.W.2d 247—Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Brooks, 132 S.W. 95, 63 Civ.App. 231, error refused.

(5) Burden of proving a prejudicial abuse of discretion rests on the party complaining of the grant or denial of a continuance.

Ala.—City of Birmingham v. Goolsby, 150 So. 322, 227 Ala. 421.

Cal.—White v. Rurup, 199 P.2d 451, 88 C.A.2d 692.

Tex.—Dean v. Allied Oil Co., Civ. App., 261 S.W.2d 900, error dismissed.

(6) Presumptions as to grant or refusal of continuances generally see supra § 1545.

Stipulation of parties

(1) Whether a continuance should be granted on the stipulation of the parties is in the discretion of the trial court, subject to revision only if such discretion is abused.

Cal.—Lorraine v. McComb, 32 P.2d 960, 220 C. 753.

(2) "The essence of the grievance of petitioners is that under said practice a trial court, by insisting upon trial on a day certain, over protest of both litigants, acts so arbitrarily as to violate the legal rights of the parties. However, it requires no effort to see that there are two sides to this controversy. The orderly and effective dispatch of legal business is the controlling factor with the court. The rights and conveniences of the parties to each particular cause present the other side. It is regrettable that a clash may at times occur between these forces. But the exercise of controlling discretion in such a situation must be exerted by the trial court, subject to revision by the higher courts if such discretion is abused. Ordinarily it should be possible to accommodate the parties in cases where they mutually agree to a postponement of the trial date, but in case this becomes impracticable, the judicial control imposed in the court by the Constitution must prevail."

Cal.—Lorraine v. McComb, 32 P.2d 960, 961, 220 C. 753.

Consideration of alleged facts and testimony

In determining whether denial of continuance constituted abuse of discretion, alleged facts and testimony taken on trial should be considered together.

Tex.—Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Jones, Civ.App., 303 S.W.2d 432.

The general rule has been applied where the continuance or postponement has been sought because of the absence or illness of witnesses,[39] parties,[40] counsel,[41] the court reporter,[42] or a juror;[43] inability to obtain counsel;[43.5] surprise;[44] amendments to pleadings;[45] the pendency of another ac-

Reverification of pleading

"The granting of permission to defendant at the opening of the trial to verify an answer which was a general denial, and which previously had been verified by defendants' counsel, and the refusal of the court on application by plaintiff for a continuance because of the reverification, does not disclose an abuse of discretion by the court nor afford ground for a reversal."

tion or proceeding;[45.5] or for the purpose of obtaining evidence.[46]

Likewise, the exercise by the trial court of its discretion in determining the time which should be allowed a party to prepare his application or affidavit for a continuance,[47] or the length of time for which a continuance shall be granted,[48] will be interfered with only if there has been a clear abuse of discretion.

c. Selection and Impaneling of Jury

§ 1601. In General

The exercise by the trial court of its discretionary powers as to the selection or impaneling of the jury will be interfered with on appeal only for a clear abuse of discretion.

Although such discretion is a legal one subject to review or revision for manifest abuse,[49] it is generally held that, if no abuse is shown, the appellate court will not review or disturb the trial court's determination of discretionary matters relating to the selection or impaneling of jurors.[50] This rule has been applied with respect to the scope and extent of the voir dire examination of a prospective juror,[51] the order in which parties are allowed to challenge jurors,[51.5] and the allowance of a peremptory challenge to which a party is not entitled as a matter of right.[52]

Special jury. Where the governing statute does not lay down any rule by which the trial judge is to be governed in exercising his discretion in ruling on a motion for a special jury, his judgment thereon is not reviewable.[52.5]

§ 1602. Rulings as to Competency

A discretionary ruling by the trial court on the competency or qualifications of a juror will not be reviewed or interfered with except for clear abuse of discretion.

Unless the discretion of the trial court has been abused or erroneously exercised,[53] its determination

d. Proceedings at Trial

§ 1603. Conduct of Trial in General

An appellate court will not disturb the exercise by the trial court of its discretion as to the course and conduct of a trial unless an abuse of discretion clearly appears.

Formation of opinion

The issue raised on challenge on ground that juror had formed opinion founded on rumor, statements in public journals, or common notoriety, and on which he has expressed opinion, is one of mixed law and fact, and finding of court thereon should not be set aside by reviewing court, unless juror could not in law be deemed impartial.

a juror, or ordering a mistrial for matters occurring during the trial are matters within the discretion of the trial court and reversible only for abuse.[64.5] The question whether error has been committed by reason of the injection of improper matter before the jury must be considered in the light of whether a trial judge has abused his discretion in the management of a trial with due regard to the rights of the parties.[64.10]

Comments by trial judge. The comments of the court on occurrences during the trial,[65] or on the evidence, where he is authorized to comment thereon,[66] will not be reviewed or held erroneous except for an abuse of discretion.

Making findings of fact. When the trial judge is not required to make requested findings of fact, his failure to do so is not reviewable.[67]

Requested findings and conclusions. Unless an abuse of discretion is shown, an appellate court will not disturb the exercise by the trial court of its discretion in allowing an opportunity to file requested findings and conclusions.[67.5]

§ 1604. Reception of Evidence

a. In general
b. Determination of preliminary questions of fact
c. Subpoena duces tecum

a. In General

The exercise by the trial court of its discretion in ruling on the admission or rejection of evidence will generally not be reviewed unless its discretion has been abused.

The exercise by the trial court of its discretion in ruling on the admission or rejection of evidence will generally not be reviewed by an appellate court,[67.50] unless it is clearly or plainly shown that the trial court abused its discretion.[68]

Actions and conduct just before accident

(1) The question of remoteness of evidence as to the actions and conduct of a party, particularly as to the rate of speed and method of driving an automobile just before a collision, rests largely in the discretion of the trial court, the ruling of which will not be disturbed except on a clear showing of an abuse of discretion.

discretion in passing on the admissibility of dying declarations.[81.10]

Fixation, limitation, and extension of time. In the absence of anything showing an abuse of discretion, an appellate court will not disturb the ruling by the trial court fixing, limiting, and extending the time for taking testimony.[81.15]

Authentication of photographs

(1) Action of trial court in determining preliminary question whether photograph offered in evidence shows situation with sufficient accuracy to render it admissible can rarely be reviewed.

and whether or not the jury shall be excused while the trial judge is hearing evidence bearing on the preliminary questions is a discretionary matter for the judge as to which his ruling will be reversed only in case of abuse.[83]

Business records. The determination by the trial court of whether a sufficient foundation for the admission of business records under the Uniform Business Records as Evidence Act and similar statutes will not be disturbed unless the court abused its discretion;[83.1] where nothing appears in the evidence which indicates any factual basis on which to exclude the evidence in the exercise of the sound discretion by the trial court, an appellate court must hold that the lower court erred in excluding the business records.[83.2] The proper verification of account book entries, as a basis for receiving them in evidence, is a question within the sound discretion of the trial judge, and his discretion will not be reversed if there is any evidence reasonably tending to support it.[83.3]

Judicial notice. The exercise by the trial court of its discretion in determining whether to take judicial notice of certain matters is subject to review for abuse.[83.4]

Testimony given on former trial. In the absence of abuse, an appellate court will not review the exercise by the trial court of its discretion in determining whether a sufficient predicate has been laid to justify the admission of a transcript of the testimony given by a witness on a former trial.[83.5]

(2) The trial judge's ruling on whether a photograph is sufficiently identified, as a correct representation of the object it purports to portray, to be admissible will not be disturbed in the absence of an abuse of discretion.

(3) Appellate court will not review trial court's exercise of its discretion in determining sufficiency of preliminary proofs offered to identify photograph and to show that it is an accurate representation of objects which it purports to portray except for gross abuse.

Change in physical appearance

Whenever an object is offered in evidence and its probative value as such depends upon its physical appearance, and objection to its admission is based on claim that its condition and appearance has so materially changed that it does not portray true situation, trial court's ruling will not be disturbed in absence of clear abuse in exercise of its discretion.

Wash.—Kiessling v. Northwest Greyhound Lines, 229 P.2d 835, 38 Wash.2d 289.

Competency of insane person to testify

Ohio.—Shupp v. Farrar, 88 N.E.2d 924, 85 Ohio App. 366.

Declarations of coconspirators

The amount of evidence necessary before evidence of declarations of alleged coconspirators is admissible lies within the discretion of the trial court, which will not be questioned unless abused.

Conn.—Antonio Pepe Co. v. Apuzzo, 120 A. 681, 98 Conn. 807.

Demonstrative evidence

Trial court's exercise of its discretion in determining relevancy and explanatory value of demonstrative evidence is subject to review, in order to curtail abuses, as to actual use made of object.

Ill.—Smith v. Ohio Oil Co., 134 N.E. 2d 526, 10 Ill.App.2d 67.

Documentary evidence

The trial court's discretion, as to whether sufficient preliminary proof of the authenticity of documentary evidence has been offered to justify its admission, will not be disturbed in the absence of abuse.

Cal.—Duggan v. Forderer, 249 P. 533, 79 C.A. 339.

Spontaneity of declarations

(1) Even though reviewing court, if sitting as trial court, would have made a different decision, where decision by trial judge appears to be a reasonable one, appellate court will not interfere in determination of whether or not declaration should be admissible under spontaneous exclamation exception to hearsay rule.

Ohio.—Potter v. Baker, 124 N.E.2d 140, 162 Ohio St. 488.

(2) Before admitting evidence of a claimed spontaneous declaration, the trial judge must decide the preliminary question of whether declarant had opportunity for deliberation and reflection, and whether the declaration was spontaneous, but his decision thereon is in his discretion, and not reviewable unless an unreasonable exercise of discretion.

Conn.—Perry v. Haritos, 124 A. 44, 100 Conn. 476.

(3) Unless trial court abused its discretion, ruling on admissibility of spontaneous statements will not be disturbed.

(2) Competency of Children

The determination by the trial court of the competency of children to testify will not be disturbed on appeal unless it clearly abused its discretion.

The determination by the trial court of the question whether a child is competent to testify will not be disturbed on appeal unless the trial court clearly[83.10] abused its discretion.[83.11] An appellate court will not disturb the decision of the trial court unless error is manifest,[83.12] or it is plainly shown that the judgment of the trial court was without any evidentiary support.[83.13]

A trial court permitting a child to testify after finding him unqualified on his voir dire examination commits a palpable abuse of discretion, reviewable by the appellate court.[83.14]

(3) Foundation for Parol or Secondary Evidence

Unless an abuse of discretion is shown, an appellate court will not disturb the determination by the trial court of whether or not a sufficient foundation for the admission of secondary evidence has been laid.

An appellate court may review the exercise by the trial court of its judicial discretion as to whether an adequate predicate for the admission of parol testimony has been laid.[83.20]

The determination by the trial court of whether or not a sufficient foundation has been laid for the admission of secondary evidence will not be reversed in the absence of a clear,[83.21] gross,[83.22] or manifest[83.23] abuse of discretion,[83.24] or unless an abuse of discretion amounting to error of law is shown to exist.[83.25]

(4) Qualifications of Experts or Opinion Witnesses

An appellate court will ordinarily interfere with the exercise by the trial court of its discretion in determining the qualifications of experts or opinion witnesses only where error or an abuse of discretion is shown.

Appellate courts are slow to interfere with the exercise by the trial court of its discretion in ruling on the competency of witnesses to testify as experts.[83.30] The determination by the trial court is ordinarily final or conclusive,[83.31] and will not be disturbed by an appellate court,[83.32] even though the appellate court might have decided differently if the question had been presented to it in the first instance.[83.33]

The rulings of the trial court as to whether or not a witness is qualified to testify as an expert or give his opinion on a subject will ordinarily not be reversed unless an abuse of discretion is shown,[83.34]

83.30 Ind.—Linton-Summit Coal Co. v. Hutchison, 111 N.E.2d 819, 232 Ind. 369.

Whether a witness' qualifications to state his opinion is sufficiently established as resting largely in the discretion of the trial court see Evidence § 458.

fest,[83.47] palpable,[83.48] plain,[83.49] or prejudicial[83.50] error;[83.51] and a clear showing of error as a matter of law,[83.52] or as an abuse of discretion,[83.53] has been required.

If the exercise by the trial court of its discretion is misguided by error of law as to who is an expert, its determination is subject to review.[83.54] The ruling of the trial court is subject to review where there is a manifest misunderstanding,[83.55] or an erroneous view,[83.56] of legal principles, or where the trial court proceeded on erroneous legal standards.[83.57]

Evidence. The ruling of the trial court may be reviewed if there is no evidence of the qualification of the witness,[83.58] or if it is not justified by,[83.59] or is against,[83.60] the evidence. Such ruling will not be disturbed if there is any,[83.61] or any substantial,[83.62] evidence to support it, or unless an actual want of evidence is shown.[83.63]

Matter of law. The determination by the trial court is subject to review when the preliminary question of the competency of a witness to testify as an expert is made to turn on a matter of law.[83.64]

Serious mistake. An appellate court will not disturb the exercise by the trial court of its discretion unless a serious mistake is shown.[83.65]

Wrong determination. A reviewing court will not interfere unless the determination by the trial court was clearly,[83.66] palpably,[83.67] palpably and grossly,[83.68] or plainly[83.69] wrong.

(5) Res Gestae

Where there is no evidence that the declarations were of a spontaneous character, or where the trial court abused its discretion, its ruling as to whether a statement is admissible as part of the res gestæ is subject to review or reversal.

The exercise by the trial court of its discretion in determining whether a statement is admissible as part of the res gestæ is subject to review[83.80] or reversal,[83.81] as where there is no evidence showing that the declarations were of a spontaneous character.[83.82] Unless there is a clear[83.83] abuse of discretion, the determination by the trial court will not be interfered with.[83.84] It is also held that such exercise of discretion will not be interfered with unless it is made to appear that the trial court erred to the prejudice of the complaining party,[83.85] or it clearly appears from the undisputed circumstances in the evidence that the testimony should have been admitted or rejected.[83.86]

Matter of law. Unless an appellate court can say as a matter of law that the trial court erred in applying the rule of res gestæ it must refuse to disturb the action of the trial court.[83.87]

c. Subpoena Duces Tecum

The action of the trial court on matters involving a subpoena duces tecum is reviewable only where its discretion has been abused or has not been properly exercised.

The review of the issuance of a subpœna duces tecum is limited to determining whether there has been a clear abuse of discretion by the trial court.[83.91]

Granting opposing counsel permission to examine papers and documents which a party has been compelled to bring into court by subpœna duces tecum is reviewable only where the discretion of the lower court in this connection has not been properly exercised.[84]

§ 1605. —— Order of Proof

Rulings of the trial court as to the order in which evidence shall be introduced will not be reviewed unless there is an abuse of the discretion with which the court is vested in such matters.

It is very generally held that a ruling of the trial court with respect to the order in which evidence surrebuttal which should have been part of the party's case in chief;[88] evidence requiring the establishment of a preliminary foundation to render it admissible before the foundation has been laid;[89] or with respect to the order in which several defendants will proceed with their testimony.[90]

Burden of showing abuse. An appellate court will not presume that the trial court abused its discretion in regulating the order of proof,[90.5] and the complaining party has the burden of affirmatively establishing an abuse of discretion.[90.10]

§ 1606. —— Reopening Case

The exercise by the trial court of its discretion as to reopening the case for further proof, or as to what evidence shall be admitted after such reopening, will not be reviewed unless its discretion has been abused or improperly exercised.

Whether a case shall be reopened for the taking of additional evidence is a matter primarily for the trial court.[90.50] The exercise of its discretion in reopening or refusing to reopen a case is subject to review,[90.52] although it is seldom, and only under unusual circumstances, resulting in manifest prejudice to the complaining party, that such exercise of discretion is reversed.[90.54] A reviewing court cannot interfere merely because it may believe that it would have decided the issue differently,[90.56] nor can it consider the result it might have reached; it is required to look at the situation as it was presented to the trial court, in view of which its discretion was necessarily exercised.[90.58]

While it has been broadly held that the exercise of its discretion by the trial court will not be revised on appeal,[90.60] the more general rule is that such have held a refusal to reopen reviewable and ground for reversal.[7]

General rules applied in considering motions for new trial will be applied in reviewing the denial of an application for a retrial of one of the issues.[7.5]

Evidence admitted after reopening. After the case has been reopened, the further evidence or proof which will be admitted is discretionary with the court, as discussed in Trial § 110, and its exercise of discretion with respect thereto will not be reviewed unless it has been abused.[8]

Positive injustice. A reviewing court will not override the exercise by the trial court of its discretion unless positive injustice would result from the action of the lower court.[8.5]

§ 1607. Striking or Withdrawal of Evidence

The exercise by the trial court of its discretion as to the striking or withdrawal of evidence will not be reviewed unless there has been an abuse.

ercise of its discretion in the matter of withdrawal[10] of evidence is not subject to review in the absence of an abuse thereof.

Incompetent testimony without objection. Where incompetent testimony comes into the record without objection, the refusal by the trial court to strike the testimony on a subsequent motion is not such an abuse of discretion as would require a reversal on appeal.[10.5]

§ 1608. Examination and Impeachment of Witnesses

An appellate court will not review or control the exercise by the trial court of its discretion as to the examination or impeachment of witnesses unless such discretion has been abused.

Unless such discretion has been abused, an appellate court will not seek to review or control the exercise by the trial court of its discretion as to the examination[11] or cross-examination[12] of witnesses;

Prior contradictory statements

(1) The discretion of the trial court as to whether or not a party should be permitted to introduce prior contradictory statements of a witness, on the grounds of surprise, will not be reviewed unless abused.

its ruling is clearly wrong.[16.20]

Double examination. The exercise by the trial court of its discretion in permitting a double examination by a person appearing as plaintiff and defendant by different counsel will not be reviewed in the absence of an abuse of discretion.[16.25] In the absence of an abuse of discretion, an appellate court will not disturb the trial court's ruling permitting both attorneys for a party to examine a witness at separate times.[16.30]

Hypothetical questions. In passing on the sufficiency of the facts narrated in a hypothetical question, the appellate court is justified in placing considerable reliance on the determination by the trial court.[16.35] The ruling by the trial court on the sufficiency of the form and contents of a hypothetical question propounded to a witness will not be reviewed unless there has been an abuse of discretion,[16.40] and an appellate court will not override the exercise by the trial court of its discretion in determining the scope, fullness, and distinctness of hypothetical questions unless it very clearly appears to have been wrongly exercised.[16.45]

§ 1609. Limiting Number of Witnesses

Except where abuse is clearly shown, an appellate court will not review the exercise by the trial court of its discretion in limiting the number of witnesses or depositions.

An appellate court will not review the exercise by the trial court of its discretion in limiting the number of witnesses or depositions that may be offered on a given point,[17] except where an abuse thereof is clearly shown.[18] Likewise, the discretion of the court as to the number of witnesses for whom the prevailing party shall be allowed to tax costs will not be reviewed unless it appears to have been abused.[19]

Expert witnesses. The ruling of the trial court as to the number of expert witnesses who will be allowed to testify on each side will not ordinarily be disturbed on appeal.[19.5]

§ 1610. Separation and Exclusion of Witnesses

Discretionary rulings of the trial court as to the separation or exclusion of witnesses will not be reviewed except for abuse of discretion.

In the absence of an abuse in the exercise by the trial court of its discretion in excluding witnesses, its ruling is conclusive.[19.50] The discretion of the trial court in determining whether witnesses shall be excluded or separated and examined out of the presence of each other,[20] whether a witness shall

§ 1611. Arguments and Conduct of Counsel

An appellate court will not disturb the exercise by the trial court of its discretion as to the arguments and conduct of counsel unless there has been an abuse of discretion.

Although such exercise is reviewable,[26] an appellate court will not, in the absence of an abuse of discretion, disturb the exercise by the trial court of its discretion with respect to the conduct of counsel in the course of the trial,[27] and their opening state-

Prejudicial refusal of right

It is within the discretion of the trial court to award the right to open and close; but where defendant had the burden of proof on the only issue in the case, the refusal to award him such right was ground for reversal, it appearing that the verdict on conflicting evidence for plaintiff was not unanimous and that plaintiff only succeeded in obtaining a sufficient number of the jurors to return a verdict.

improper argument,[38] will not be disturbed, unless there has been an abuse of discretion.

Double argument. The exercise by the trial court of its discretion in permitting a double argument by a person appearing as plaintiff and defendant by different counsel will not be reviewed in the absence of an abuse of discretion.[38.5] Where there are two attorneys engaged in the trial of a cause for plaintiff, and when the evidence is in, one attorney makes an opening argument for plaintiff, and defendant's counsel waives argument, the refusal of the trial court to permit the second counsel to further address jury for plaintiff will not be held error unless an abuse of discretion is shown.[38.10]

If the answering argument was provoked as a rejoinder to the argument made by the other party, no error is shown in the absence of a clear showing of an abuse of the discretion by the trial court.[38.15] An appellate court will not disturb the ruling of the trial court in permitting counsel to reply to a comment made by opposing counsel, in the absence of an abuse of the discretion of the trial court.[38.20]

Mistrial. Unless it is apparent that a mistrial was essential to the preservation of the right of a fair trial, an appellate court will not interfere with the exercise by the trial court of its discretion in passing on a motion for a mistrial because of improper arguments or conduct of counsel.[38.25] An appellate court will not disturb the exercise by the trial court of its discretion in ordering or refusing a mistrial for improper argument unless it appears that the trial court abused its discretion,[38.30] and positive injury resulted.[38.35]

Withdrawal of juror. The exercise by the trial court of its discretion in granting or refusing a motion to withdraw a juror because of improper remarks by counsel will not be disturbed in the absence of an abuse of discretion.[38.40] Unless the direct[41] or set aside[41.5] a verdict, a motion for judgment,[41.10] a demurrer to the evidence,[42] or a motion to withdraw a demurrer to the evidence,[43] will not be disturbed unless such discretion has been abused. If, however, plaintiff's own case shows that he has no legal right to recover, a failure of the trial court to dismiss the action cannot be considered as an exercise of discretion and is therefore reviewable.[44] In considering whether the action of the trial court was well founded, an appellate court applies stricter rules to actions ordering a directed verdict or granting a nonsuit than where only a new trial has been granted.[44.5]

§ 1613. Instructions

Unless there has been an abuse, the exercise by the trial court of its discretion as to the giving of instructions to the jury will not be reviewed.

Unless an abuse of discretion is clearly shown, an appellate court will not disturb the exercise by the trial court of its discretion with reference to recalling the jury for further instructions after retirement,[45] the giving of, or refusal to give, instructions which it has a discretionary power to withhold,[46] granting requests for instructions out of time, or at a late stage of the case,[47] oral requests to charge the jury,[48] the sequence in which instructions are given,[48.5] the form and contents of instructions,[48.10] the extent to which the evidence

Facts

(1) Trial judge's action in determining extent to which facts shall be stated in charge, and commentaries to be made on them, held not open to exception.
N.H.—American Employers Ins. Co. v. Wentworth, 5 A.2d 265, 90 N.H. 112.

(2) Extent to which details of the facts should be discussed in charge should be referred to in the instructions,[49] whether there should be a repetition in one part of the instructions of matters elsewhere covered,[50] whether the jury should be instructed to state in their verdict upon which of several counts they find for plaintiff,[51] attempting to correct in the instructions the prejudicial effect of inadmissible evidence rather than order a mistrial,[52] or the giving of, or refusal to give, cautionary instructions.[53]

Examination of charges. Unless it appears that the trial court abused its discretion in fixing the time allowed for the examination of the charge by the court and the preparation of exceptions and objections thereto, an appellate court will not interfere.[53.5]

§ 1614. Submission of Issues to Jury

Exercise by a trial court of its discretionary power to grant or deny a jury trial will not be disturbed unless there is an abuse.

Where the trial court has become vested with the discretionary power either to grant or deny a jury trial, its order on the matter will not be disturbed on appeal in the absence of a manifest abuse of discretion,[54] nor will a refusal of the trial court, at a late hour of the day, to delay submission of the case until the following morning to give appellant an opportunity to produce an additional witness.[55]

Withdrawal instructions. The exercise by the trial court of its discretion in the giving or refusal of withdrawal instructions will not be disturbed unless an abuse of discretion is shown.[55.5]

§ 1615. —— Interrogatories or Special Verdicts

Unless discretion has been abused, an appellate court will not disturb the exercise by the trial court of its discretion as to submission to the jury of interrogatories or questions for special findings or verdicts.

Unless there has been a clear abuse of discretion, an appellate court will not disturb the exercise by the trial court of its discretion in determining whether or not interrogatories or questions for special findings or verdicts should be submitted to the

§ 1617. Custody and Conduct of Jury

Unless there has been a manifest abuse of discretion, an appellate court will not disturb the exercise by the trial court of its discretion as to the custody or conduct of the jury.

An appellate court will not interfere with the exercise by the trial court of its discretion in procedural matters with respect to the returning of a verdict by a jury unless a manifest abuse of discretion is shown;[64.50] and the same principle applies to the exercise by the trial court of its discretionary powers with reference to the custody[65] and conduct[66] of the jury generally. This rule has been applied to the ruling of the trial court on whether there was misconduct on the part of jurors justifying the declaring of a mistrial,[67] the length of time which should be given to the consideration of the case by the jury,[68] the exclusion of the jury during arguments on questions of law,[69] permitting jurors to leave the court room,[70] or to separate before the verdict,[71] the reading to the jurors of certain portions of the testimony during their deliberations,[71.5] the papers, exhibits, or documents which shall be taken or sent to the jury room,[72] polling

"While directing an issue to be tried by a jury is a matter of discretion with a court of equity, it is not an arbitrary discretion, but one to be exercised upon sound principles of reason and justice, a mistake in its exercise is just ground of appeal, and the appellate court will determine whether or not it has been properly exercised in a given case. It is error to direct an issue when it should not have been exercised, and it is equally error to fail to direct one when it should have been directed."

§ 1618. View by Court or Jury

Unless an abuse of discretion clearly appears, an appellate court will not disturb the exercise by the trial court of its discretion as to whether the jury shall be permitted to view the physical facts involved, or whether the court itself will do so.

Where an abuse of discretion is not shown, the action of the trial court in allowing or refusing to allow the jury to view the locus in quo will not ordinarily be reversed.[75.50] The exercise by the trial court of its discretion as to whether or not the jury shall be permitted to view or inspect the premises or the physical facts involved will be interfered with on appeal only where an abuse of discretion is clearly shown,[76] or where it appears that the ruling of the trial court was plainly wrong.[76.5]

Where the trial court refused to view the premises, an appellate court will not reverse the judgment of the lower court unless it is apparent from the record that there has been an abuse of discretion.[76.10]

e. New Trial or Rehearing

§ 1619. In General

A discretionary ruling on a motion for a new trial or rehearing will be disturbed on appeal only for a clear or manifest abuse of discretion; the grant of a new trial is more reluctantly interfered with than a a denial thereof, and a much stronger showing is necessary for reversal where a new trial is granted than where it is denied.

When a motion or application for a new trial is addressed to the sound discretion of the lower court under the rules stated in New Trial § 201 an appellate court will interfere with the exercise of that discretion on comparatively rare occasions,[76.50] in

Test of abuse of discretion

Test of whether court abused its discretion in ruling on motion to set aside verdict is whether discretion was exercised on grounds or for reasons clearly untenable or to an extent clearly unreasonable.

Vt.—Oligny v. Underwood, 71 A.2d 250, 116 Vt. 193—Macauley v. Hyde, 42 A.2d 482, 114 Vt. 198—Healy v. Moore, 187 A. 679, 108 Vt. 324, followed in 187 A. 692, 108 Vt. 351.

Second new trial

Where a trial judge's ruling is made after a prior trial before a dif-

held by many authorities, must be clear;[77] other au- | thorities require that a showing be made of palferent judge and jury, his ruling will not be reversed unless he has abused the sound discretion confided to him; if evidence is substantially similar at both trials and both juries reach the same conclusion, it is a factor to be considered in determining whether discretion was abused, but that fact taken alone is not controlling.

Cal.—Perry v. Fowler, 229 P.2d 46, 102 C.A.2d 808.

Inconsistent ruling

Where trial court denied motion in one case, but granted motion in action tried together therewith, and no appeal was taken in first case, any inconsistency in court's action was not ground for reversal of grant in absence of showing that such order was otherwise improper.

pable,[77.5] unmistakable,[77.10] or manifest[77.15] abuse. Similarly, a discretionary ruling on a motion for a new trial will not be reviewed or revised unless an obvious miscarriage of justice will otherwise result.[77.20]

Furthermore, where there appears to be a reasonable, or even a fairly debatable, justification for the order, it will not be set aside[77.25] even though a contrary order might not be disapproved or the appellate court might be inclined to take a different view of the motion.[77.30] These rules are particularly applicable where there are questions or matters involved which the trial court is better qualified to pass on or determine than the appellate court.[78] Similar rules prevail with respect to the review of discretionary rulings on motions for rehearing.[79]

The rules above stated are applicable where the new trial or rehearing has been granted.[80] A re-

4 C.J. p 830 note 45.

First grant

Ga.—Law v. Hodges, 185 S.E. 584, 53 Ga.App. 319.

Second grant

(1) Since presumption of legality of grant weakens on each concurrent verdict and a second and third grant should be more closely scrutinized, reviewing court must carefully investigate to determine if discretion to grant second or third new trial has been justly, wisely, and prudently exercised.

Ga.—Ansley v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 71 S.E.2d 434, 86 Ga.App. 152.

(2) After grant of one new trial, subsequent grant will be closely examined to see that discretion has been wisely exercised, with due regard to realization of superior opportunity of juries to ascertain facts and of necessity eventually to end litigation; second grant of new trial will be affirmed, not only where verdict was not supported by evidence, but where supporting evidence was unsatisfactory and decided preponderance was on side of losing party.

Ga.—Allen v. Southern Ins. Securities Corp., 187 S.E. 714, 54 Ga.App. 316.

Question for review

(1) Generally.

Cal.—Woods v. Walker, 136 P.2d 72, 57 C.A.2d 968—Roma Wine Co. v. Hardware Mut. Fire Ins. Co. of Minnesota, 88 P.2d 260, 31 C.A.2d 455.

(2) Reviewing court has duty to review grant of new trial and determine whether there has been an abuse of discretion.

Pa.—Millenson v. City Stores Co., 114 A.2d 80, 382 Pa. 39—Wilt v. Blazier, 114 A.2d 111, 382 Pa. 143—Londrino v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of the U. S., 105 A.2d 333, 377 Pa. 543—Decker v. Kulesza, 85 A.2d 413, 369 Pa. 259.

(3) Appellate court considers only whether under evidence trial court had sufficient ground to exercise its discretion and, if so, whether it abused that discretion.

N.D.—McDermott v. Sway, 50 N.W.2d 235, 78 N.D. 521.

Wash.—Coppo v. Van Wieringen, 217 P.2d 294, 36 Wash.2d 120.

(4) Appellate review is confined to examination of reasons assigned for award of new trial to determine whether court below properly exercised judicial discretion.

Pa.—Elser v. Union Paving Co., 74 A.2d 529, 167 Pa.Super. 62.

(5) Reasons which impel trial court to exercise discretion are unimportant to court of appeals, only question for determination being whether court abused its discretion.

Ga.—Carter v. Powell, 195 S.E. 466, 57 Ga.App. 360.

Reason for rule

(1) Trial judge who sees and hears the witnesses is far better able to decide what weight should be given their testimony, and as to what is proper course to be pursued.

Pa.—Kline v. Thornton, 200 A. 88, 331 Pa. 71.

(2) The granting of a new trial does not finally dispose of a controversy.

Cal.—Townsend v. Gonzalez, App., 309 P.2d 878.

Test of abuse of discretion

(1) In determining whether discretion was abused, test is not how reviewing court might have acted under circumstances but whether trial court in performing challenged act exceeded bounds of reason.

Ariz.—Bradley v. Philhower, 299 P. 2d 648.

(2) It must appear that judgment of court is not justified and is clearly against reason and evidence and is not merely error of judgment.

Ohio.—State v. Wright, 17 N.E.2d 428, 59 Ohio App. 191, reversed on other grounds 20 N.E.2d 229, 135 Ohio St. 187.

viewing court will not lightly set aside an order granting a new trial;[80.5] rather, it is liberal in sustaining such action of the trial court,[80.10] except where the trial court has clearly abused its discretion or its ruling is plainly erroneous, especially as a matter of law.[80.15] It has also been held that the granting of a new trial is so much within the discretion of a trial court that, to warrant a reversal of the order, appellant must clearly establish error with respect to some pure, simple, and unmixed question of law,[80.20] and it must appear that the order was based wholly thereon.[80.25]

Similarly, the exercise of discretion will not be reviewed unless the trial court makes it clearly appear that the reasons set forth in its opinion are the only ones which moved it to grant a new trial,[80.30] or unless the trial judge files a certificate with the appellate court to that effect;[80.35] the statement of the trial court, in granting the motion, that it deemed a retrial necessary in the interest of justice forecloses further inquiry, where no abuse of discretion is shown.[80.40] An appellate court will not examine the validity of the reasons expressed by the trial court for granting a new trial where there was clearly a proper exercise of judicial discretion.[80.45]

The rules above set forth with respect to the review of rulings on a motion for a new trial are also applicable where the new trial or rehearing which is sought has been denied.[81] Generally, also, the

(3) "Abuse of discretion," which will authorize reversal of grant of new trial in face of motion for judgment on special verdict, connotes something more than error of law or of judgment and contemplates a view or action that no conscientious judge, acting intelligently, could honestly have taken.
Ohio.—Globe Indem. Co. v. Schmitt, 68 N.E.2d 130, 77 Ohio App. 413.

(4) Where appellants failed to show that trial court was induced by no tenable ground, supreme court could not say that trial court abused its discretion.

Reason seemingly insufficient or invalid
Pa.—Streilein v. Vogel, 69 A.2d 97, 363 Pa. 379.

Equivalent statement
Opinion of lower court that only those reasons which were directed at excessiveness of verdict had real merit was equivalent to statement that new trial was granted for such reasons alone.
Pa.—Culver v. Lehigh Valley Transit Co., 186 A. 70, 322 Pa. 503.

Limited scope of opinion insufficient as statement
Fact that opinion referred to only one question or to single point in case will not be treated as conclusive proof that point or question thus accentuated controlled entry of order appealed from.
Pa.—Mozino v. Canuso, 120 A.2d 300, 384 Pa. 220—Class v. Nachod Brewing Co. v. Giacobello, 121 A. 333, 277 Pa. 530.

Review of reasons given
Appellate court will not review order unless lower court states that it would have refused such order but for reasons distinctly set forth which, in lower court's opinion, control whole case, and, in such situation, court will review reasons given only when such reasons do not involve the consideration of oral evidence further than as to legal effect of such evidence in some isolated and all-controlling particular wherein verity of evidence is admitted.

Trial by court

Ga.—Petkas v. Wright Co., 73 S.E.2d 224, 87 Ga.App. 189.

Question on review

(1) Generally.

Del.—Pitts v. White, 109 A.2d 786, 10 Terry 78.

N.D.—Mann v. Policyholders' Nat. Life Ins. Co., 51 N.W.2d 853, 78 N. D. 724.

(2) Supreme Court's only function, on appeal from order denying motion, is to determine whether discretion was abused.

S.D.—Johnson v. Olson, 26 N.W.2d 132, 71 S.D. 486.

(3) Inquiry of appellate court is not whether on the record a new trial apparently might have been properly granted, but whether refusal involved violation of clear legal right or manifest abuse of judicial discretion.

Minn.—Austin v. Rosecke, 61 N.W.2d 240, 240 Minn. 321—Skog v. Pomush, 17 N.W.2d 641, 219 Minn. 322—Vietor v. Costello, 279 N.W. 743, 203 Minn. 41.

(4) Question raised was whether there was an abuse of discretion, and abuse of discretion could be said to exist only when refusal became a shock to reason and justice.

Denial of second new trial

Where a case was submitted to a jury and resulted in a verdict for plaintiff, and the trial court awarded a new trial, upon which the same result was reached, refusal of another new trial is so largely a matter of discretion in the court below that it will not be reviewed except in a clear case of abuse of discretion which was held not shown under the circumstances.

Test of abuse of discretion

Abuse of discretion in limiting scope of new trial appears when

Appellate courts tend to encourage the exercise of discretion in favor of the grant of new trials, and to discourage appeals therefrom.[83] Orders granting new trials stand on a firmer foundation than orders denying them;[83.5] the reason for discriminating in favor of grants of new trials is that they are not decisive of the case, but only open the way for a reinvestigation of the entire case on its facts and merits.[83.10] Appellate courts are more liberal in sustaining an order granting a new trial than one denying it,[83.15] and an order granting a new trial is considered more favorably than one denying it,[83.20] since an order granting a new trial never finally disposes of the rights of the parties, while a denial thereof may dispose of their rights.[83.25] So, an appellate court will interfere more readily where a trial court refuses to grant a new trial than where it does grant it;[83.30] the grant of a new trial is more reluctantly interfered with than a denial thereof, and a much stronger showing is necessary to obtain a reversal where a new trial is granted than where it is denied,[84] ex-damages are inadequate, record discloses that issue of liability is close, and other circumstances indicate that verdict was probably result of prejudice, sympathy, or compromise, or that liability issue was not actually determined.

Limited new trial

Order granting new trial limited to damages will be reversed when it is shown that damages awarded are inadequate, that issue of liability is close, and other circumstances indicate that verdict was probably result of prejudice, sympathy, or improper compromise.

Cal.—Cary v. Wentzel, 247 P.2d 341, 39 C.2d 491.

New trial without good reason

(1) To set aside a verdict and judgment, when there is no error in the trial, and where there is no other good reason for so doing, is abuse of discretion by the trial court, and is an erroneous ruling, which the court of appeals will correct.

Ky.—Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. Salyers, 218 S.W. 474, 187 Ky. 144, 150.

(2) In determining whether there was abuse of discretion in setting aside a verdict and granting a new trial, the test is whether the court's discretion has been exercised on grounds or for reasons clearly untenable, or to an extent clearly unreasonable.

Vt.—Farr v. Fisher, 178 A. 883, 107 Vt. 331, 98 A.L.R. 926—Woodhouse v. Woodhouse, 130 A. 758, 99 Vt. 91.

(3) "The ordering of a retrial, for the mere purpose of correcting a matter needing no correction, but being in entire accord with the law, would be such abuse of discretion warranting setting aside the order."

Pa.—Walker v. Walker, 107 A. 219, 220, 264 Pa. 68.

General grounds

Any abuse of discretion by trial court in granting new trial on general grounds only will result in reversal.

that the grant of a new trial will be disturbed for manifest error or legal abuse is inapplicable in some jurisdictions by reason of statutory provisions to the effect that an order granting a first new trial can be disturbed by the appellate court only where the law and the facts absolutely demand the verdict rendered.[88]

Absence of brief of evidence adduced at trial

Ga.—Conwell v. Price, 24 S.E.2d 851, 69 Ga.App. 63.

Where a verdict was contrary to law, the principle that unless the verdict was demanded by the law and the evidence, the first grant of a new trial will not be disturbed, was inapplicable.

Ga.—Davis v. Davis, 11 S.E.2d 884, 191 Ga. 333.

Conditional grant of new trial

The rule is applicable when the grant of a new trial is conditional and the condition is not complied with.

Ga.—Skipper v. Overall, 171 S.E. 310, 47 Ga.App. 691—Ellis v. Spell, 93 S.E. 49, 20 Ga.App. 347.

Grounds of motion or of new trial

(1) In Georgia the statutory rule applies regardless of the grounds on which the motion was based or the new trial granted; nor will the appellate court determine whether the trial court was right in granting the motion on a special ground.

Ga.—Glenn v. Tankersley, 200 S.E. 709, 187 Ga. 129—Griffith v. Sellers, 153 S.E. 359, 170 Ga. 577—Silver & Goldstein v. Chapman, 129 S.E. 842, 161 Ga. 203—Ballenger v. Ballenger, 94 S.E. 237, 147 Ga. 351.

4 C.J. p 832 note 47 [b] (3).

(2) Accordingly, where the verdict was not absolutely demanded by the evidence, the appellate court will affirm, even though the presiding judge considered irrelevant, immaterial, and improper matter in passing on the motion.

Ga.—Mays v. Mays, 126 S.E. 299, 33 Ga.App. 335.

(3) It is immaterial even that a specific ground set out in the order is not a sufficient ground for a new trial.

Ga.—Allen v. Gershon & Ruskin, 91 S.E. 893, 19 Ga.App. 500.

(4) It is also immaterial that the order is based on insufficient ground or single ground not well taken.

Ga.—Jenkins v. Brown, 183 S.E. 85, 52 Ga.App. 241.

(5) Only question appellate court will determine is whether verdict was demanded by evidence even though judge may have in terms based grant on some special ground of motion.

Ga.—Throgmorton v. Trammell, 83 S.E.2d 256, 90 Ga.App. 433.

(6) In Missouri, however, the rule seems to apply only where the first new trial is granted on the weight of the evidence.

Mo.—Leavel v. Johnston, 232 S.W. 1064, 209 Mo.App. 197.

Verdict demanded

(1) Even the first grant of a new trial should be reversed, if the verdict as rendered was demanded.

Ga.—Moody v. Moody, 22 S.E.2d 836, 195 Ga. 13—Brenner v. Wright, 2 S.E.2d 410, 187 Ga. 770.

(2) The fact, however, that one moving for a new trial abandoned the general grounds, to the effect that the verdict was contrary to the evidence, and without evidence to support it, etc., does not make it affirmatively appear that the verdict was absolutely demanded under the law and the evidence within the rule.

Ga.—Rowe Bros. Motor Express Co. v. Twiggs County, 110 S.E. 303, 152 Ga. 548, answers to certified questions conformed to 110 S.E. 925, 28 Ga.App. 211.

(3) Where damages sued for are not liquidated, but are speculative only, and are for jury under evidence, notwithstanding evidence may demand finding that defendant is liable to plaintiff in some amount, verdict in amount found by jury is not as a matter of law demanded.

Ga.—Buchanan v. Nash, 89 S.E.2d 637, 211 Ga. 874.

Lawson v. Lawson, 7 S.E.2d 603, 61 Ga.App. 787.

Different verdict authorized

(1) This court will never interfere with the first grant of a new trial where there is any evidence at all on which a different verdict could be sustained.

Ga.—Wellbeloved v. Wellbeloved, 75 S.E.2d 424, 209 Ga. 709—Graham v. Eastman, 75 Ga. 889.

(2) Where evidence is in conflict and jury would have been authorized to render a verdict for movant, judgment granting first new trial will not be disturbed.

Ga.—Hopkins v. Brumbelow, 24 S.E. 2d 318, 195 Ga. 388.

What constitutes first new trial

(1) A first new trial, within the meaning of the rule, is the first one granted to a particular party, and hence the rule applies although two new trials have been granted if they have been granted to different parties.

Ga.—Schiefer v. Durden, 192 S.E. 388, 56 Ga.App. 167—Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Macon Ry. & Light Co., 93 S.E. 170, 20 Ga.App. 548—Hawk v. Western & A. R. Co., 93 S.E. 40, 20 Ga.App. 395—Elder v. Woodruff Hardware & Mfg. Co., 91 S.E. 942, 19 Ga.App. 626.

4 C.J. p 832 note 47 [b] (5).

(2) A new trial granted after trial was had after reversal of a judgment dismissing the petition on general demurrer is a first new trial, within the rule.

Ga.—Buchanan v. Nash, 89 S.E.2d 637, 211 Ga. 874—Denson v. Denson, 23 S.E. 838, 97 Ga. 359—Jenkins v. Brown, 183 S.E. 85, 52 Ga. App. 241.

(3) Where the court directed a verdict on the first trial, and the direction was reversed on review, the grant of a new trial after a verdict by the jury on the second trial without direction was the first judgment setting aside the actual finding of the jury, and was subject to the rule that the first grant of a new trial will not be disturbed, except where the verdict is demanded by the evidence, notwithstanding the second verdict was in favor of the same party and to the same effect as the first verdict.

Mays v. Mays, 126 S.E. 299, 33 Ga.App. 335.

(4) Where directions of the verdict in the first two trials of an action were reversed and the third trial resulted in a mistrial, the grant of a new trial, after a verdict by the jury on the fourth trial without direction, will not be disturbed unless the evidence demands the verdict.

Ga.—Mitchell v. West End Park Co., 170 S.E. 376, 177 Ga. 449.

(5) Where motion for new trial was denied, and, on appeal, judg-court will examine the question to determine whether the reason given justified the ruling,[88.5] and where the motion is sustained for a manifestly insufficient reason, and it does not appear from the record that there was any sufficient reason for a new trial, the order will be reversed.[88.10]

An abuse of the discretion of the trial court in granting a new trial will not be presumed, but must appear from the record.[88.15] It will be presumed, however, that the trial court properly exercised its discretion in acting on a motion for a new trial,[89] and the burden of showing an abuse thereof rests on the party complaining,[90] who is required to show a clear abuse of discretion.[90.5]

In determining whether there has been an abuse of discretion the entire record should be examined.[91] The failure of the record to show a reason for granting a new trial is not sufficient to show an abuse of discretion, but the record must affirmatively show an abuse of discretion to authorize a disturbance of an order granting a new trial.[91.5]

The appellate court will not reverse merely because, upon the record before it, it comes to a different conclusion;[92] and where conflicting conclusions could be reached, the court cannot say that granting a new trial was an abuse of discretion.[93] If a new trial has been granted, the evidence will be viewed in the light most favorable to the order rather than the verdict,[94] while if the new trial has been denied the evidence will be construed most favorably in support of the verdict.[95]

The fact that the motion for a new trial is passed on by a judge other than the one who presided at the trial does not necessarily prevent the application of the above rules;[96] and a statutory rule that a first grant of a new trial will not be disturbed if the verdict is not absolutely demanded applies even though the new trial is granted by a judge other ment was reversed on principle of law and case was remanded for trial, and on second trial verdict was returned in favor of same party and motion for new trial was granted, such granting was first grant of motion for new trial under law.

Ga.—Throgmorton v. Trammell, 83 S.E.2d 256, 90 Ga.App. 433.

(6) Where case was remanded by supreme court to trial court for additional findings of fact, because auditor erred in ruling, grant of new trial to plaintiffs, after verdict for defendants at subsequent trial, was subject to rule that first grant of a new trial will not be disturbed.

than the one who presided at the trial.[97] The action of a judge who did not preside may be more readily reviewed or reversed than would similar action by the presiding judge,[97.5] especially where the judge ruling on the motion is in no better position than the appellate court to pass on the matters involved and hence not accorded as wide a discretion as the presiding judge.[98]

The general rule that the grant or denial of a motion for a new trial will not be disturbed on appeal has no application where the affidavit or other evidence on which the order is made furnishes no basis for the exercise of discretion.[98.5] A trial judge's exercise of discretion as to whether to grant a new trial on grounds not presented in the motion for new trial in proper and timely manner is not reviewable on appeal.[98.10]

Failure or refusal to exercise discretion. A clear showing of the failure[98.15] or refusal[99] of the trial court to exercise its discretion in passing on a motion for a new trial may constitute a ground for reversal; but, if no motion has been made, a failure of the court to act on its own motion ordinarily will not be treated as error.[1]

§ 1620. Questions of Law

Rulings made on questions of law in passing on a motion for a new trial are subject to review; such rulings are not matters of discretion.

The grant or refusal of a new trial will be disturbed on appeal only if the trial court abused its discretion, as discussed supra § 1619, or if the record shows clearly that the trial court erred in its view of some question of law.[1.50] Such question, accord-

Failure to exercise discretion not shown

(1) An order refusing a new trial did not in itself indicate that the judge was dissatisfied with the verdict or failed to exercise the discretion required of him in approving or disapproving it so as to require a reversal, although while the motion was under consideration plaintiff applied for, and obtained, a reduction in the amount of the verdict after the trial judge announced that the only thing that was troubling or bothering him was the amount of the jury's verdict.

Ga.—Davis v. Jones, 129 S.E. 892, 34 Ga.App. 7.

(2) The fact that the judge, in passing on a motion for a new trial, stated that he did not feel that he should grant it as the court of appeals had reversed his decision of nonsuit on a former trial, did not require a reversal on the ground that the trial court had failed to exercise his discretion.

Burden of proof

(1) One who appeals from granting of new trial must show either that trial court manifestly abused its discretionary power to award a new trial or that its action was based on clear error of law.

Pa.—Jury v. New York Cent. R. Co., 74 A.2d 531, 167 Pa.Super. 244.

(2) Party complaining must clearly establish error with respect to some question of law.

Questions involving statutes

Appellate court will not review order unless whole controversy may be ended by determination of constitutionality, applicability, construction, or effect of statute, or other matter of writing, which, so far as case at hand is concerned, could not be controlled or affected by evidence outside writing itself, and in such instances record must show, not only point in question, but also governing force of point.

ing to some authorities, must be a pure, simple, or unmixed one;[1.55] according to other authorities the question must be one which, in the circumstances, controlled the outcome of the case,[1.60] and is certified by the trial court as the sole reason for its action.[1.65] When necessary, a reviewing court will examine the entire record to determine whether the trial court, in granting a new trial, erred on some unmixed question of law.[1.70]

When the court, in granting or refusing a new trial, rules on a question of law, such ruling is not a matter of discretion, and the ruling may, and should, be reviewed.[2] In other words, the rule that

"Strictly speaking, the law is never a subject resting in the discretion of the trial judge; and when he errs in regard to it in his instructions to the jury, it is by no means exact to say that he has abused his discretion, but this court has repeatedly held—the most recent case being First National Bank of Birmingham v. Fidelity Title Trust Co., 97 A. 77, 251 Pa. 536—that a court can abuse its discretionary power as to the law as well as to the facts in passing upon an application for a new trial, and that when a new trial is based on a plain and palpable error of law applicable to the facts of the case, it is such an abuse of discretion as will warrant a reversal."

Pa.—President, etc., of Danboro & Plumsteadville Turnpike Road Co. v. Bucks County, 102 A. 171, 172, 258 Pa. 391.

Rebellion against supreme court ruling

Where the trial court indicates its ruling granting a new trial was based solely on a rebellion against the supreme court's ruling, a case is presented for review.

Colo.—Crosby v. Canino, 3 P.2d 792, 89 Colo. 434, 78 A.L.R. 1202.

What constitutes rulings of law

(1) The judge's statement of the reason, for granting a new trial that, after separation, inquiry was not made in the jury room, by the jurors, as to prejudicial occurrences during separation, is a ruling of law.

Mass.—Dziegiel v. Town of Westford, 174 N.E. 495, 274 Mass. 291.

(2) In an action by a vendee of land for false representations, where a motion to set aside a verdict for plaintiff was specifically based on the legal insufficiency of the representation to support an action, granting the motion necessarily involved a ruling that the representation was insufficient to support the action, and the ruling was reviewable on such question, where the plaintiff excepted.

Vt.—Nichols v. Lane, 106 A. 592, 93 Vt. 87.

(3) The rule that the court's discretion in deciding a motion to set aside the verdict cannot be reviewed on exceptions, unless the court failed to exercise its discretion or abused it, does not apply when all the evidence is before the court, and the exception is based on the ground that the verdict is contrary to the instructions of the court.

Vt.—Wellman v. Wales, 122 A. 659, 97 Vt. 245—Whitman v. Dailey, 115 A. 559, 95 Vt. 454.

(4) Where reasons assigned by trial court are clearly erroneous, no element of discretion is involved, and such order must be reviewed on appeal solely as matter of law.

Okl.—Browne v. Bassett, 126 P.2d 705, 191 Okl. 22.

(5) Trial court's statement that new trial was granted because of conviction of defendants' material witness for perjury in giving of testimony in the case was not such a ruling on a question of law as would prevent operation of statute relating to review of first grant of new trial.

Ga.—Geo. A. Hormel & Co. v. Ramsey, 7 S.E.2d 789, 62 Ga.App. 343.

(6) Appeal from order granting new trial on ground of misconstruction of provisions of policy did not involve discretion.

S.D.—Christensen v. Royal Ins. Co. of Liverpool, 272 N.W. 820, 65 S.D. 246.

Latitude of trial court

Judgment of trial judge is accorded greater latitude on question of evidence than on questions of law.

Ill.—Masters v. Central Ill. Elec. & Gas Co., 129 N.E.2d 586, 7 Ill.App. 348.

Questions of law not favored on appeal

Although appellate court is disposed to look with favor on sustaining of motion, such favor can only be extended to matters involving exercise of judicial discretion, and not to matters presenting pure questions of law and reviewable as such on appeal.

§ 1621. Grounds of Order Granting New Trial Not Shown

Justification for an order granting a new trial must be found in the record, where reasons are not given; when the grounds for a ruling on such a motion are not shown, it may be presumed that the court acted in the exercise of its discretion.

Where a trial court does not give a reason for granting a new trial, justification for the order must be found in the record.[3.50] In the absence of a request of either of the parties that the trial court state its reasons for sustaining a motion for a new trial, failure of the record to show a reason is not sufficient to show an abuse of discretion; in order for that to appear, the record must affirmatively show it.[3.55]

Where an order on a motion for a new trial is general in terms, so that it does not appear whether or not the ruling was based on a ground concerning which the law has invested the court with discretion, it may be assumed to have been in the exercise of discretion;[4] and where the notice of intention to move for a new trial was based on the minutes of the court as well as a bill of exceptions thereafter to be settled, it will be presumed on appeal, the record being silent as to the existence of a bill of exceptions, that the order was made on the minutes of the court, so that the burden is on appellant to show that it was not so made.[5]

An appellate court will not disturb an order granting a new trial where such order does not state the grounds or reasons therefor,[5.5] at least if there is sufficient evidence to take the case to the jury,[5.10] or if it cannot be said that the verdict was, as a matter of law, the only verdict that could have been rendered.[5.15] It has been held, however, that when the record does not show the grounds an order granting a new trial will be reversed where the verdict was supported by the evidence and the judgment on the verdict was correct.[6]

§ 1622. Grant or Denial of Motion on Particular Grounds

The general rule that the appellate court will not review or revise the trial court's exercise of its discretion in ruling on a motion for a new trial has been applied to rulings or motions based on many different grounds, including the ground that the interests of justice required the new trial or that substantial justice had not been done.

As will appear in this section and infra §§ 1623-1627, the general rule that the appellate court will not review or revise the trial court's exercise of its discretion in ruling on a motion for a new trial has been applied with respect to rulings or motions based upon many different grounds. It has been held that the general rule is especially applicable when a motion is sustained on numerous grounds or exceptions, which, taken together, may have disclosed error, although no single one was sufficient to warrant a new trial.[7]

The burden of showing that the ground upon which the court based an order for a new trial does not support it is on appellant; but, as to the other grounds of the motion, it will be presumed that the court's ruling was right until respondent shows the contrary.[8]

Interests of justice. The grant of a new trial in the interests of justice will be disturbed on appeal only in rare instances,[8.5] and only where it clearly appears that there was an abuse of discretion,[8.10]

since the discretion of the trial court in this matter is greater than that of an appellate court.[8.15] However, this rule does not apply where the order is based on a controlling question of law[8.20] of which the trial court took an erroneous view,[8.25] or where a verdict should have been directed for the party who prevailed with the jury.[8.30]

A grant of a new trial to promote the interests of justice will not be reversed merely because a reviewing court reaches a different conclusion on the record.[8.35]

Generally, if there are several defendants, and the record shows that the interests of justice require a new trial as to all of them, an order to that effect will not be disturbed on appeal.[8.40]

Substantial justice not done. The exercise of the inherent power of a trial court to grant a new trial on the ground that substantial justice has not been done will rarely be disturbed on appeal.[8.45]

§ 1623. —— Errors or Irregularities

Discretionary rulings on motions for a new trial based on alleged errors or irregularities at the trial will not be reviewed or revised except for an abuse of discretion and except where such rulings are not regarded as involving discretion.

The rule that the trial court's exercise of its discretion with respect to motions for new trial will not be reviewed or revised except for abuse has been applied to rulings on motions based on alleged errors or irregularities occurring before the trial,[8.60] or at the trial,[9] such as the misconduct of a party[10] or of

Introduction of irrelevant and prejudicial issues

Pa.—Schornig v. Speer, 24 A.2d 12, 343 Pa. 649.

Abuse of discretion

(1) Generally.
Ohio.—Maggio v. City of Cleveland, 84 N.E.2d 912, 151 Ohio St. 136.

(2) After grant of new trial on ground of counsel's improper remarks, supreme court will act where there has been abuse of discretion, which is determined by examination of remarks made, circumstances under which they were made, and precaution taken by court and counsel to remove their prejudicial effects.
Pa.—Narciso v. Mauch Chunk Tp.,

ted by counsel in failing to disclose or reveal that he represented an insurance association or company.[12.5]

The general rule has also been applied to other irregularities occurring at the trial, such as the misconduct of the jury or of a juror;[13] the want of

Weight of determination of trial court

(1) When trial court does not consider instances of alleged improper argument sufficient to require a new trial, supreme court will defer to trial court's opinion in these matters, unless on full examination of record it appears that improper argument was so prejudicial, inflammatory, and outside record as to affect result on the merits.

Mo.—Collins v. Cowger, 283 S.W.2d 554.

(2) In determining whether trial judge abused his discretion in refusing new trial on ground that verdict resulted from jury prejudice engendered by argument of counsel, reviewing court must bear in mind that trial judge, who was present and could see effect, prejudicial or otherwise, of argument, was in better position than reviewing court to gauge effect of argument on jury.

Mo.—Polizzi v. Nedrow, 247 S.W.2d 809.

Limits of discretion in Texas

"The decision in Robbins v. Wynne, (Com.App.) 44 S.W.(2d) 946, seems to preclude the operation of any discretion in the trial court whatever. That decision appears, in effect, to overrule Emberlin v. Wichita Falls, etc., Ry. Co., (Com.App.) 284 S.W. 539, which gave effect to the exercise of discretion. It does not seem arguable that if any improper argument must be affirmatively shown beyond a reasonable doubt to have had no prejudicial effect, there is left any room for the operation of judicial discretion on the part of the trial court. It seems to us that perhaps Robbins v. Wynne should be construed as not intended to deny the existence of all discretion, but merely to deny it in cases where the appellate court concludes that, notwithstanding efforts to render an otherwise material error immaterial, the error is clearly material in the opinion of the appellate court. In other words, the exercise of discretion is limited to a determination of whether error be material or not, and not to whether material error has in fact resulted in prejudice. In still other words, under this view the trial court in refusing a new trial exercises a discretion in determining whether improper argument is of a nature reasonably calculated to be prejudicial, the exercise of which discretion, although reviewable, is not reversible unless in the opinion of the appellate court it is clearly wrong. But, if the improper argument be clearly material, giving rise to the presumption of prejudicial effect, the court has no discretion in determining that it was in fact without prejudicial effect. No decision that the court could make upon that question would in any sense be binding upon the appellate court. . . . The trial judge in determining whether misconduct of the jury, or improper argument of counsel, be material or immaterial, should be regarded as exercising a true discretion, and the court's action should not be reversed unless the appellate court reaches the conclusion that it is clearly wrong."

Strong case of misconduct required

It would require a very strong case of jury misconduct to warrant court of civil appeals in interfering with discretion of trial court in ruling that it did not warrant setting aside verdict.

Abuse of discretion

(1) Where the overruling of the motion for a new trial for misconduct of the jury was an abuse of discretion, the appellate court reserves the right to consider and pass upon such ruling upon appeal.

Or.—Benson v. Birch, 10 P.2d 1050, 139 Or. 459.

(2) So if, upon a consideration of the whole of the pertinent record, it is reasonably doubtful whether or not the improper conduct affected the amount of the verdict or the decision of any other material issue, the verdict should be set aside by the trial judge; and if, in such a case, a new trial is not granted, there is an abuse of discretion by the trial judge, and reversal becomes the duty of appellate courts.

(3) Where court found that foreman of jury was guilty of affirmative misconduct, but in overruling motion court did not determine prejudice or no prejudice to defendant, but instead based ruling on theory that there must be showing that misconduct influenced verdict, order overruling motion did not present exercise of such sound judicial discretion that it should not be disturbed on appeal.

Mo.—Middleton v. Kansas City Public Service Co., 152 S.W.2d 154, 348 Mo. 107.

(4) Where refusal of trial court to grant new trial, in action against railroad for injuries sustained by employee who allegedly incurred skin disease while working in defendant's shop, on ground of misconduct of juror who denied on voir dire that in his work as manufacturer of chemical products he had had any cases of dermatitis as result of working with chemicals, although he himself had skin condition, was close to abuse of discretion, and other errors were committed at trial, case would be reversed for new trial.

Fla.—Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Holt, 92 So.2d 169.

Hearing on affidavits

The supreme court will not ignore the discretion of the trial court in granting a new trial upon affidavits of misconduct of the jury, although the presumption in favor of the court's discretion is less strong than in matters determined upon conflicting oral testimony.

Weight accorded decision of trial court

Where trial justice had granted a new trial upon a misconception of the evidence and an erroneous belief that jury had not followed the instructions, decision was not entitled to weight usually given to decisions on such motions, and the supreme court would review the evidence from transcript alone to determine whether evidence strongly preponderated against verdict.

Method of fixing amount of verdict
Trial judge's conclusions that no prejudice was suffered by defendants as result of his first telling jury that only the nine jurors who were in favor of plaintiff could participate in fixing amount of verdict, because of his later telling jury that all the jurors could do so would not be disturbed on appeal, where it did not appear to be plainly wrong.
Cal.—Carlin v. Prickett, 184 P.2d 945, 81 C.A.2d 688.

Prejudice in instruction
(1) Whether and how much instruction was misleading or prejudicial because of its abstract generality was a matter peculiarly addressed to discretion of trial court.
Mo.—Rea v. Feeback, 244 S.W.2d 1017.

(2) Question of prejudicial character of error in instruction is one for trial court except for manifest abuse of discretion.
Cal.—Zollars v. Barber, 295 P.2d 561, 140 C.A.2d 502.

(3) Rules that appellate court will usually defer to findings of trial court concerning prejudicial effect of instructions and that when motion for new trial has been sustained, appellate court will be more liberal in upholding action than in reviewing judgment on same ground on appeal, do not apply where trial court has clearly abused its discretion or where its ruling is plainly erroneous, especially as matter of law.
Mo.—Osborne v. Goodman, 289 S.W.2d 68.

Rule held inapplicable
Rule requiring recognition of discretion of trial court in determining whether error in charging jury was error calculated to affect substantial rights of plaintiff moving for new trial was inapplicable, where trial court rested ruling granting such motion on grounds not related to matter of such charge.
Ala.—Lassetter v. King, 31 So.2d 588, 249 Ala. 422.

Abuse of discretion
(1) Although the appellate court hesitates to overrule the decision of the trial court in a matter involving the exercise of a discretionary power, the grant of a new trial solely for harmlessly erroneous instructions will be reversed.
Idaho.—Applebaum v. Stanton, 276 P. 47, 47 Idaho 395.

(2) Also, an order granting a new trial solely on the theory of erroneous instructions will be reversed, where the instructions are shown to be correct.

(3) It has been held, however, that if the trial court believed that an instruction given by it was erroneous and not in harmony with court decisions, and therefore granted a new trial, its order will not be disturbed on appeal, even though upon a strict analysis of the instruction it was found to be correct, the question being, not the correctness of the instruction, but whether the trial court abused its discretion in granting the new trial.

volves no element of discretion, but only a question of law which is reviewable by the appellate court.[27]

§ 1624. —— Insufficiency of Evidence

Although they have been held subject to review, discretionary rulings on a motion for a new trial on the ground of insufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict, or because the verdict is contrary to the weight of the evidence, will generally not be disturbed unless there is a clear abuse of discretion.

Although it has been stated that the discretion of a trial court in granting a new trial on the ground that the verdict is contrary to the weight of the evidence is subject to review,[27.50] it is a more general rule that the discretionary action of the trial court in granting or denying a motion for a new trial based on that ground is not subject to review or revision except under the most extraordinary circumstances,[27.55] as where the power has been improvidently used,[27.60] or where there has been an abuse or withholding of discretion.[27.65] Similarly,

Quantum of verdict

Cal.—Amavisca v. City of Merced, App., 308 P.2d 380.

First grant of new trial

Cal.—Whitfield v. De Brincat, 96 P.2d 156, 35 C.A.2d 476.

Review of evidence

An appellate court will not review, compare, or evaluate evidence unless must clearly appear before the ruling will be reviewed.[29] there has been an abuse of discretion in granting a new trial.

Cal.—Stone v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist., 185 P.2d 396, 81 C.A.2d 902.

Question for review; test

(1) Generally.
Conn.—Markee v. Turner, 103 A.2d 533, 140 Conn. 701.
N.D.—Olson v. Thompson, 74 N.W.2d 432—Crossen v. Rognlie, 68 N.W.2d 110.
Wash.—White's Trucking Co. v. Kuney, 104 P.2d 587, 4 Wash.2d 623.

(2) Appellate court will merely determine whether trial court acted within its discretion when it discredited testimony presented by party opposing the motion.
Cal.—Myles v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp., 143 P.2d 972, 62 C.A.2d 14.

(3) Discretion of trial court will not be deemed to have been abused unless a decision in favor of moving party would have no substantial support in the evidence.
Cal.—Myles v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp., supra.

(4) Question was whether trial court abused its discretion in granting new trial, and not whether appellate court would have reversed jury's verdict as without evidentiary support, and appellate court must respect not jury's verdict but trial court's judgment, unless that judgment was clearly wrong.
Nev.—Pagni v. City of Sparks, 293 P.2d 421—Arrowhead Freight Lines, Limited v. White, 287 P.2d 718.

(5) To reverse order granting new trial, supreme court must be convinced that there are strong and cogent reasons for concluding that trial court was not exercising legal discretion in weighing the evidence.
N.D.—Crossen v. Rognlie, 68 N.W.2d 110.

After directed verdict

A judgment granting a new trial after a directed verdict has been returned against the party having the burden of proof will not be reversed where it may have been induced by a belief that the failure to make a prima facie case was excusable and capable of remedy.

do not apply where the facts are undisputed,[31] where the facts create a question for the jury under circumstances in which it cannot be said that a verdict, as rendered, could be contrary to the evidence,[31.5] or where only questions of law are involved.[32] There is authority for the proposition that the appellate court will review a ruling on a motion for a new trial on the ground of insufficiency of evidence where the judge granting the motion did not try the case;[33] but other authority is to the contrary effect.[33.5]

It has been said that the rule that orders granting new trials on the ground that the verdict is not supported by the evidence will be sustained as discretionary is designed to include only cases where the trial court, for reasons peculiarly within its knowledge, is justified in concluding that the ends of justice will be best served by submitting the evidence to another jury.[34] Orders granting new trials on the ground of insufficiency of the evidence stand on a firmer foundation in a reviewing court than orders denying new trials, since such orders are not decisive of the case, but only open the way to a reinvestigation of the entire case.[34.5]

With respect to the denial of a motion, the discretion of the court will usually be upheld if there

Questions of law

(1) Where the evidence is fully presented to the supreme court and appellant has presented all the evidence it is possible for her to present, the question is one of law for the supreme court as to whether the evidence was sufficient for the jury.

Iowa.—Snyder v. Guthrie, 187 N.W. 953, 193 Iowa 624, 24 A.L.R. 950.

(2) Whether the court erred in granting defendant a new trial on the ground that plaintiff was contributorily negligent as a matter of law is a question of law only, where the facts were undisputed.

S.D.—Plucker v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 219 N.W. 254, 52 S.D. 554.

(3) The question of whether or not the evidence introduced or offered by respondent makes a prima facie case entitling it to recover judgment against appellants or either of them is a pure question of law, where there is no conflict whatever in the evidence, and consequently no matter of discretion on the part of the lower court is involved in a ruling made by that court upon respondent's motion for a new trial.

Wash.—Citizens' Nat. Bank of Los Angeles, Cal. v. Galland, 280 P. 62, 153 Wash. 669.

(4) Where no other verdict than the one returned could be sustained under the evidence, setting the verdict aside and granting a new trial is an error of law, reviewable by the supreme court.

Wash.—Severns Motor Co. v. Hamilton, 214 P.2d 516, 35 Wash.2d 602—Mount v. Krilich, 230 P. 828, 131 Wash. 627.

(5) The rule that the court's discretion in deciding a motion to set aside the verdict cannot be reviewed on exceptions, unless the court failed to exercise its discretion or abused it, does not apply when all the evidence is before the court, and the exception is based on the ground that the verdict is wholly unsupported by the evidence.

Vt.—Healy v. Moore, 187 A. 679, 108 Vt. 324, followed in 187 A. 692, 108 Vt. 351—Wellman v. Wales, 122 A. 659, 97 Vt. 245—Whitman v. Dailey, 115 A. 559, 95 Vt. 454.

(6) Granting a new trial on defendant's motion because the facts were not legally sufficient to support a verdict for plaintiff is not the exercise of a judicial discretion, but the determination of a legal question.

Mo.—Smith v. Kansas City Public Service Co., 43 S.W.2d 548, 328 Mo. 979.

(7) Error of law cannot, however, be predicated on the denial of a motion for a new trial because of insufficiency of the evidence to show certain facts where the question could have been, but was not, raised by a request for an instruction.

is some evidence to support the verdict,[35] but not where there is a total lack of evidence to sustain part of the verdict.[36]

Where a new trial is granted on the ground of insufficiency of the evidence, the judgment of the trial court is accorded greater latitude than on questions of law,[36.5] and since an appellate court does not look with favor on finding a trial court guilty of an abuse of discretion in granting a motion,[36.10] a stronger case is required to secure a reversal than where a new trial has been denied.[37]

The action of the trial court in granting a new trial will not be disturbed where there is any substantial evidence, contradicted or uncontradicted, which will support conclusions reached by the trial court,[37.5] where there appears to be a reasonable, or even fairly debatable, justification therefor, notwithstanding the reviewing court might take a different view from that of the trial court or might not disapprove a contrary view,[37.10] or where there is evidence which would have supported a verdict[37.15] or judgment[37.20] in favor of the moving party. Furthermore, the action of the trial court will be disturbed only if the evidence palpably supports the verdict,[38] if there is no substantial evidence

Limitation of rule
The general rule that it takes a stronger case to reverse an order granting, than one refusing, a new trial, must be properly confined to cases where the evidence is not only conflicting, but also where the verdict is against the weight of the evidence, and the evidence is wholly insufficient to support the verdict.

Question for review; test
(1) Generally.
Mo.—Lomax v. Sawtell, App., 286 S.W.2d 40.

(2) On appeal from order granting plaintiff's motion for new trial, issue was whether there was evidence which would have sustained judgment in favor of plaintiff.

to justify a result contrary to the verdict,[38.5] if no verdict for the party to whom a new trial is awarded would be allowed to stand,[39] or if it can be said as a matter of law that there is no substantial evidence to support a judgment contrary to that rendered.[39.5] Under other authorities, an order granting a new trial can be disturbed only if, under the evidence, the verdict of the jury could be reasonably arrived at by fair and intelligent men acting reasonably,[40] or the evidence adduced in behalf of the adverse party is insufficient to raise an issue for the jury.[41]

Nevertheless the discretion of the court in granting or denying a motion for a new trial for insufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict is a legal discretion, not an arbitrary one, and an abuse thereof will ordinarily constitute a ground for reversal.[42] In determining whether the trial court abused its discretion, however, the appellate court cannot weigh the testimony, as this is entirely a matter for the jury in the first instance and then for the trial court when considering the motion for a new trial,[43] but the evidence will be reviewed on appeal to determine whether the discretion exercised by the trial court was a legal and reasonable one,[43.5] and whether it was abused;[43.10] and the weight and credibility of the testimony will be reviewed only to determine whether the order of the trial court was an abuse of discretion.[43.15]

4 C.J. p 833 note 57 [d].

Where a motion for a new trial is granted for the insufficiency of the evidence to justify a verdict, an appellate court will not find that there has been an abuse of discretion until it has considered the entire record.[43.20]

Presumptions and burden of proof. On an appeal from an order granting a new trial for the insufficiency of the evidence to support a verdict, every presumption will be indulged in favor of the proper exercise of the discretion of the trial judge,[43.25] and appellant has the burden of proof as to an abuse of that discretion,[43.30] which burden ordinarily requires a showing that there is no evidence which would have supported a verdict for the party moving for a new trial.[43.35]

Interests of justice. An appellate court is reluctant to interfere with the conclusion of the trial court in granting a new trial on the grounds that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence and that the interests of justice require a new trial;[43.40] but the power to interfere has not been abdicated.[43.45] Accordingly, the appellate court will not disturb such ruling in the absence of a palpable abuse of discretion,[43.50] unless the case turns on a question of law,[43.55] which question has been required to be one that in the circumstances necessarily controls the outcome of the case, and is certified by the trial judge as the sole reason for his action.[43.60]

It has also been held that a grant of a new trial on these grounds will not be disturbed unless a party is entitled to the entry of judgment on the record.[43.65]

The grant of a second new trial on the evidence will be closely examined to see that the lower court wisely exercised its discretion,[44] the test in such a case being whether it is more probable that the court is correct in its holding than that the verdict of the jury is correct.[45] Since the trial judge is better able to determine whether the verdict was supported by a decided preponderance of the evidence, his judgment on the second grant of a new trial will not be disturbed on the merely mathematical contention that the greater, or an equal, number of witnesses testified for the successful party, unless the opposing testimony was manifestly weak and unsatisfactory.[45.5]

On an appeal from a second order granting a new trial after the jury reached the same conclusion as in a previous trial on the same testimony, a reviewing court is warranted in reversing the second order for a less aggravated abuse of discretion than in reversing a first order therefor.[45.10]

§ 1625. —— Newly Discovered Evidence

A discretionary ruling on a motion for a new trial because of newly discovered evidence will be reviewed or revised by an appellate court only for a clear abuse of discretion; so, denial of the motion has been upheld in such situations as where the evidence could not produce a different result.

After a trial court has exercised its discretion and granted a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, its action is not looked on with either distrust or disfavor by an appellate court.[45.50] The granting, or the denial, of a motion for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence

4 C.J. p 835 note 67.

"A complaint for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, pursuant to section 589, Burns' 1914, must be regarded as a substitute for a bill in chancery. See Moore v. Coates, 35 Ohio St. 177. The trial court must determine, in the first instance, whether the proof is clear, strong, and satisfactory; whether an injustice has been done; whether the plaintiff has exercised reasonable diligence; and whether the ends of justice require that a new trial be granted. In passing on each case the trial court exercises a legal discretion, and on appeal its judgment will be reversed only for the abuse of that discretion."

Ind.—Eastern Rock Island Plow Co. v. Stout, 147 N.E. 160, 165, 84 Ind.App. 217.

"To sustain these exceptions [to the trial judge's denial of defendant's motion for new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence] it is necessary to decide that no conscientious judge, acting intelligently, could honestly have taken the view taken by him."

Mass.—Davis v. Boston Elevated Ry. Co., 126 N.E. 841, 846, 235 Mass. 482.

Refusal to consider newly discovered evidence

Question on appeal is whether trial court abused its discretion in denying or granting application.

Manifest miscarriage of justice

On appeal from order granting new trial appellate court cannot substitute its judgment for judgment of trial judge and, to reverse order because of an alleged abuse of discretion, it was required clearly to appear that the injury resulting from the alleged wrong was sufficiently grave to amount to a manifest miscarriage of justice.

Cal.—Dasso v. Bradbury, 104 P.2d 128, 39 C.A.2d 712.

Diligence in procuring evidence

(1) Generally.

Tex.—Dutton v. Kinsey, Civ.App., 124 S.W.2d 446.

(2) Whether newly discovered evidence could with reasonable diligence have been discovered and produced at the trial is a question for the lower court, whose ruling thereon will not be disturbed in the absence of an abuse of discretion.

(3) Discretion is presumed to have been properly exercised and presumption must be overcome by clear want of facts before order will be disturbed.

Cal.—Brannock v. Bromley, 86 P.2d 1062, 30 C.A.2d 516.

(4) Discretion of trial judge in refusing new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence would not be interfered with where there was no affidavit of any of defendant's counsel that they did not know of existence of such evidence before trial, and that it could not have been discovered by exercise of ordinary diligence.

Ga.—May v. Lee, 197 S.E. 50, 57 Ga. App. 893.

(5) Refusal of new trial for after-discovered evidence would be affirmed where affidavit contained no averment that evidence could not have been obtained during trial by use of reasonable diligence, and there was no inherent reason apparent why evidence could not have been so obtained.

Pa.—Peters v. Colonial Life Ins. Co. of America, 193 A. 460, 128 Pa.Super. 21.

(6) Reviewing court should hesitate to disturb ruling, granting motion, on ground that due diligence to discover evidence has not been shown, where ruling has any substance whatever on which to rest.

(7) Supreme court could not hold that trial court was guilty of an which fact is required to be clearly shown on appeal.[46.5]

The general rule has no application where the affidavit or other evidence on which the order is made furnishes no basis for the exercise of such discretion,[46.10] and, in that event, the order will be reversed.[46.20] Furthermore, the ruling of the trial court on such a motion will be interfered with where it is obvious that the discretion of the court has been abused.[47]

The denial of a motion based on newly discovered evidence has been upheld as within the discretion of the court where it was not shown that the evidence would come within the rule authorizing the court to grant a new trial because thereof;[48] where the evidence was merely cumulative;[49] where every abuse of discretion in denying new trial on ground of lack of reasonable diligence to obtain evidence prior to trial, unless court could say from evidence as contained in record that trial judge should have believed reasonable diligence was used, and should have so concluded as a matter of law.

(8) Whether party made timely and diligent search for witnesses who might reasonably be expected to be in possession of evidence concerning material facts is a matter which appellate court will consider in determining whether trial court abused its discretion in granting motion.
Cal.—Dry v. City & County of San Francisco, 189 P.2d 761, 83 C.A.2d 790.

Resolution of doubt

Doubt as to the sound exercise of discretion by trial court must be resolved in favor of the ruling on a motion for a new trial for newly discovered evidence.

Whether evidence is cumulative is question for sound discretion of trial judge, and exercise of such discretion will not be interfered with by the appellate court on appeal except in cases of manifest abuse.
Ind.—Hull v. Burress, 93 N.E.2d 213, 120 Ind.App. 507.

material fact alleged in the motion is contradicted by counter affidavits;[50] where the evidence, if admitted, could be used only for purposes of impeachment;[51] or where it is of a character which could not reasonably produce a different result,[52] or is not so convincing as to raise a strong presumption that a different result would be reached on a second trial.[52.5]

Only when the showing made on the motion for a new trial is of such a character as to make it manifest that the case would, or should, result differently on a retrial is an appellate court authorized to say that the discretion vested in a trial court has been abused;[52.10] hence, where the newly discovered evidence is denied by counter-affidavits, and the question whether the evidence would change the result on a new trial is debatable, the appellate court is not authorized to interfere with the discretion of the trial court in denying the motion.[52.15]

A trial court which in its discretion has seen fit to grant a new trial because of after-discovered evidence is not held to the same strictness with respect to the requirements or incidents of such evidence as is a party seeking the reversal of a refusal to grant a new trial.[52.20]

§ 1626. —— Inadequate or Excessive Damages

Unless there has been an abuse of discretion, or discretion was not exercised, the ruling of the trial court on a motion for a new trial on the ground that the damages are excessive or inadequate will not be reviewed; this rule applies where the action of the court is conditioned on the remitting of a portion of the award or on an increase thereof.

The discretion of the trial court in ruling on a motion for a new trial based on the inadequacy or excessiveness of damages is a legal one which is subject to review or reversal for clear abuse or arbitrary exercise,[53] or where it appears to the reviewing court that the damages awarded are entirely inadequate,[53.5] or where, in addition, there is a suggestion that they were a compromise between the right of recovery and the amount of damages sustained.[53.10]

Question for review

(1) Only question presented on appeal from order granting motion is whether trial court abused its discretion in determining that damages were inadequate.

Cal.—Patterson v. Rowe, 247 P.2d 949, 113 C.A.2d 119.

Utah.—Chatelain v. Thackeray, 100 P.2d 191, 98 Utah 525.

awarded by the jury in its verdict.[54.10]

(2) Question before appellate court, in determining whether there was abuse of sound discretion in granting new trial for inadequacy of verdict, was not whether, in opinion of court, verdict was inadequate, but whether trial court committed gross abuse of discretion in granting new trial because verdict was inadequate.
Pa.—Gibson v. Hallacher, 107 A.2d 449, 176 Pa.Super. 539.

(3) Supreme court would determine only whether trial court abused discretion in overruling motion and would not weigh evidence.
Mo.—Waller v. Oliver, 296 S.W.2d 44—Roush v. Alkire Truck Lines, 245 S.W.2d 8.

Test of abuse of discretion

(1) In determining whether trial court improperly granted a new trial, supreme court would review evidence to determine whether discretion exercised was a legal and reasonable one, and if so found order would be sustained even though trial court would have been justified in reaching different conclusion.
N.D.—Haser v. Pape, 50 N.W.2d 240, 78 N.D. 481—Johnson v. Patterson, 270 N.W. 97, 67 N.D. 132.

(2) In order that appellate court may find abuse of discretion, evidence must compel conviction that jury was influenced by partiality, prejudice or passion, or by some misconception of law or evidence.
Pa.—Ewing v. Marsh, 101 A.2d 391, 174 Pa.Super. 589.

(3) Superior court will not declare trial court guilty of abuse of discretion unless there is a clear case of wrong or injustice which trial court should have remedied.
Pa.—Stevens v. Frank, 30 A.2d 161, 151 Pa.Super. 222.

(4) To establish an abuse of discretion in overruling motion, it must appear that discretion was exercised on grounds, or for reasons, clearly untenable to an extent clearly unreasonable.
Vt.—Mullett v. Milkey, 29 A.2d 806, 113 Vt. 42.

(5) No mere difference of opinion, but nothing short of clear conviction, compelled by evidence, that jury was influenced by partiality, passion, prejudice, or some misconception of law or evidence, will justify appellate court in declaring trial court guilty of abuse of discretion in refusing new trial, where neither evidence in particular case nor law applicable thereto furnished any definite standard for measurement of damages and jury had no other guide but pure conjecture in determining amount to be awarded.

Abuse of discretion held not shown

(1) Where an award of one hundred thousand dollars actual damages for a dog killed by defendant was held by the trial court to be grossly excessive.

Cal.—Dreyer v. Cyriacks, 297 P. 35, 112 C.A. 279.

(2) Where the trial court found that a verdict of twenty-eight thousand five hundred dollars for injuries suffered by burns from a live electric wire was excessive.

Mo.—Grzeskoviak v. Union Electric Light & Power Co., 252 S.W. 364, 299 Mo. 116.

(3) Where there was evidence to support allegations of special and general damages resulting from an automobile collision and the abstract omitted the medical testimony as to the extent and duration of the injuries, that the verdict exceeded the special damages alleged does not show abuse of discretion in allowing a new trial for inadequacy of damages.

Wash.—Thornton v. Eneroth, 30 P.2d 951, 177 Wash. 1.

Burden of proving abuse rests on party complaining of grant of new trial.

Mo.—Fullerton v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 285 S.W.2d 572—Dye v. St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co., 234 S.W.2d 532, 361 Mo. 331.

Abuse shocking reason and justice

Abuse of discretion, in order to be available on appeal, must be such as to shock reason and justice.

Question for review

(1) Generally.

Mo.—Nix v. Gulf, M. & O. R. Co., 240 S.W.2d 709, 362 Mo. 187.

(2) On appeal from order granting new trial on grounds that verdict of jury is excessive, appellate court considers not whether it would reach same conclusion, but whether trial judge abused his discretion.

Ky.—Perry v. City of Cumberland, 227 S.W.2d 411, 312 Ky. 375.

(3) In reviewing denial of motion, appellate court is limited to determination of whether such ruling was an abuse of discretion.

Utah.—Paul v. Kirkendall, 261 P.2d 670, 1 Utah 2d 1.

(4) Granting of new trial for excessiveness of verdict may be reviewed as question of law on allegation of abuse of discretion.

Utah.—Duffy v. Union Pac. R. Co., 218 P.2d 1080, 118 Utah 82.

Conflict in evidence

Action in granting new trial, or requiring reduction of amount as condition of denying it, will not be reversed on appeal in absence of plain showing of abuse of discretion, and, where there is material conflict of evidence with respect to extent of damage, imputation of such abuse is repelled just as though ground of order were insufficiency of evidence to justify verdict.

increasing of the award.[55.5]

It has also been held that a discretionary ruling of the trial court in ordering a new trial on the ground of either inadequacy or excessiveness of the verdict will not be disturbed if it is reasonably supported by substantial evidence.[55.10] Although it has been held that where a new trial is granted on the ground of inadequacy of a verdict, an appellate court will not interfere, in the absence of a gross abuse of discretion, it has also been held that where a new trial on such ground is denied, an appellate court will exercise even greater caution in reviewing the action of the trial court.[55.15]

An appellate court has the power to vacate any terms set by the trial court, either in addition to, or remission of, damages set by the verdict, as a condition of the grant or denial of a new trial, when they appear to be an abuse of discretion.[55.20]

§ 1627. —— Surprise, Accident, or Mistake

The determination by the trial court of the propriety of a new trial on the grounds of surprise, accident, or mistake will generally not be reviewed unless an abuse of discretion clearly appears.

The determination by the trial court, in the exercise of its discretion, that, by reason of some surprise, accident, misfortune, or mistake in the preparation for, or in the conduct of, the trial, a new trial is necessary in order to prevent a failure of justice, is not reviewable unless there has been a clear or palpable abuse of discretion.[56]

This principle has been applied where the motion was based on the absence of a party to the suit, or of counsel,[57] the misconduct of counsel,[58] an attorney's unauthorized action in consenting to the entry of judgment without the consent of his client,[58.5] the perjury of a witness[59] or the fact that

However, in North Carolina it has been held that although, under Comp. St. § 591, the trial judge may entertain a motion to set aside a verdict and grant a new trial for excessive damages, an order over plaintiff's objection reducing the damages awarded in an action for alienation of affections and seduction, involved a matter of law or legal inference, within Const. art. 4, § 8, rather than a matter of discretion authorizing review by the supreme court.

Sufficiency of other evidence
The overruling of defendants' motion for a new trial on the ground of their witness' perjured testimony was held not reversible error, where he testified at the trial contrary to expectations,[60] recantation by an important witness of his testimony at the trial,[60.5] the inability of a party to procure certain evidence,[61] or the inadvertent failure or excusable neglect to file a timely appeal.[62]

The principle has also been applied to the impossibility of making and serving a case-made,[63] the unavailability of the reporter's transcript of the trial because of his death,[63.5] or the loss of papers from the files.[64]

The discretion of the trial court in granting a new trial is, however, a judicial rather than an arbitrary one, and the exercise thereof is reviewable,[64.5] so that the denial of a motion for a new trial will be reversed where the discretion was arbitrarily exercised,[64.10] or when the facts wholly fail to make out a case of unavoidable casualty or misfortune.[65] Moreover, where an order granting a new trial is made appealable by statute, the appellate court cannot refuse to review such order on the ground that the granting thereof was within the discretion of the trial court and that it was in a better position to understand the situation than the supreme court.[66]

§ 1628. Procedure on Motion

Discretionary rulings as to procedural matters on motions for new trial will not be reviewed except for an abuse of discretion.

Discretionary rulings made by a trial court with respect to matters of procedure on motions for new trial are not subject to review except for abuse of discretion.[67] It has been so held with respect to the refusal to permit a correction of a notice of intention to move for a new trial;[68] the allowance or the refusal of amendments of a motion for a new trial;[69] the fixing of the time within which such amendments shall be made;[70] the determination of whether the issues are severable, or so inseparably pleaded as to require a new trial as to all the issues;[70.5] and the granting of an entire new trial,[70.10] or a new trial on the single issue of the amount of damages.[70.15]

Question for review

Determination by trial court of motion for new trial limited to sin-

The rule has also been applied to the refusal to hear oral testimony of a witness whose affidavit was attached to the petition for new trial;[71] the question whether, in a case of alleged misconduct by a jury, they should be brought in for examination by the trial court;[71.5] giving consideration to some matters foreign to the record in determining the motion;[71.10] requiring the moving party to support the motion by affidavits instead of by oral testimony;[72] the sufficiency of an affidavit to show proper diligence on the part of a party to obtain a witness or seek a continuance;[72.5] the refusal to hear argument;[73] and the striking of the motion from the files.[74]

Other applications of the rule include continuing[75] or refusing to continue[75.5] the motion for a new trial; dismissing the motion because of defects therein;[76] sustaining or considering the motion notwithstanding it might have been overruled because of defects in its form,[77] or because not made in time;[78] striking from the files affidavits in opposition to the motion;[79] and the question, where a verdict is excessive, whether the trial court will grant a new trial, conditioned on a failure to file a remittitur, or will set aside the verdict unconditionally.[79.5]

The general rule is also applicable to the determination of whether a party has been guilty of laches or neglect with respect to filing a brief of the evidence,[80] or securing a settlement of a statement,[81] on the motion; setting aside an order granting a new trial, and on reconsideration, overruling a motion by the other party on condition that a remittitur be accepted;[81.5] dismissal of, or refusal to dismiss, a motion because not presented or brought on for hearing with due diligence;[82] refusal to reinstate a motion after dismissal;[83] and the refusal to grant a reargument of the motion.[83.5]

In the absence of a clear showing to the contrary, it will be presumed that the discretion of the trial judge with respect to a motion for a continuance of a hearing on a motion for a new trial was not abused.[83.10]

The refusal to hear proper evidence in support of the motion, however, deprives the court of the only available means of exercising a sound discretion in determining the motion, and constitutes an error at law from which an appeal lies;[84] and a decree will be reversed when it does not fully appear that the chancellor gave due consideration to a petition for rehearing which was well grounded.[85]

Burden of showing abuse. The complaining party has the burden of showing an abuse of discretion in proceedings following judgment.[4.10]

§ 1630. Amendment or Correction of Judgment

Unless an abuse of discretion is shown, the trial court's exercise of its discretion as to amending, correcting, or modifying a judgment will not be disturbed on appeal.

When an application to amend, correct, or modify a judgment is addressed to the discretion of the court, its action with reference thereto will not be interfered with by an appellate court unless an abuse of discretion is manifest.[5] So, unless a clear abuse of discretion is shown, the trial court's exercise of its discretion in making or refusing an order correcting a decree nunc pro tunc will not be reversed.[5.5]

Abuse of discretion defined

An abuse of discretion is not merely an error of judgment, but if in reaching a conclusion the law is overriden or misapplied, or the judgment exercised is manifestly unreasonable, or the result of partiality, prejudice, bias, or ill will, as shown by the evidence or the record, discretion is abused.

(3) Reviewing courts are very liberal in sustaining the action of the trial court during term in setting aside orders and judgments.

Ohio.—Mosher v. Mutual Home & Savings Ass'n, App., 41 N.E.2d 871.

(4) While the trial court's discretion to vacate an improper order or decree will not be controlled on appeal if exercised before lapse of the term, this discretion ends with the term unless there are extraordinary circumstances from which an inference can be fairly drawn that the parties in interest knew it was intended that action on the motion be carried over.

Ark.—Wright v. Ford, 224 S.W.2d 50, 216 Ark. 55.

(5) A very strong factual situation is required to authorize a finding that the trial court abused its discretion in setting aside its judgment during the term at which it was rendered.

Ohio.—Davis v. Teachnor, App., 53 N.E.2d 208.

Controlling factor in entry of judgment

Unless fraud, deceit, collusion, or mistake was a controlling factor in entry of judgment, without which it would not have been rendered, trial court's refusal to consider motion to vacate judgment filed after expiration of term would not be disturbed on appeal.

Fla.—Zemurray v. Kilgore, 177 So. 714, 130 Fla. 317.

Verification of motion

Where more than a year had elapsed from time motion to vacate decree was filed, refusal of trial court to allow verification of such motion was held not abuse of discretion.

ing court would have taken had the application been addressed to it.[14]

If on the pleadings and proofs doubt exists as to the real justice and equity of the case, the lower court's action in opening or refusing to open a judgment will not be disturbed on appeal.[14.5] Where the judgment is set aside by the same judge who tried the case, the appellate court will affirm the action of the lower court if there is any substantial showing of excusable neglect on the part of the moving party or some unconscionable conduct on the part of the adverse party.[14.10]

What constitutes an abuse of discretion sufficient to cause the appellate court to disturb the ruling of the trial court with reference to vacating a judgment or order depends upon the circumstances of each individual case.[15] It is sometimes said that to warrant reversal of an order vacating a judgment a much stronger showing of an abuse of discretion is necessary than where the motion is denied,[16] and an appellate court listens more readily,[16.5] scans more closely,[16.10] and is more prone to reverse,[16.15] where the appeal is from an order denying relief rather than one granting relief; but it is usually held that even a refusal to vacate will not be disturbed unless the abuse of discretion is clear.[17] Reviewing courts look with disfavor on a party, who, regardless of the merits of his case, attempts to take advantage of mistake, surprise, and inadvertence of his adversary.[17.5]

Presumptions. In accordance with the rule discussed supra § 1533, that an appellate court will indulge all reasonable presumptions in favor of the correctness of the judgment, order, or decree from which the appeal was taken, the trial judge cannot be presumed to have abused his discretion in opening or setting aside a judgment,[17.10] and an abuse of discretion must be made to appear by evidence before it can be found to exist by an appellate court.[17.15]

Burden of showing abuse. Ordinarily, the complaining party has the burden of showing that the trial court abused its discretion in opening and vacating, or in refusing to open and vacate, a judgment.[17.20]

§ 1632. —— Opening Default

a. In general
b. Particular applications of rules

a. In General

The trial court's exercise of its discretion in ruling on a motion or application to open or vacate a default judgment will not be disturbed on appeal unless there has been a clear abuse of discretion.

What constitutes abuse of discretion

An abuse of discretion is not merely an error of judgment, but if, in reaching a conclusion, the law is overridden or misapplied discretion is abused.

Decree or order pro confesso

(1) Trial judge's discretionary action with reference to setting aside or opening a decree or order pro confesso will not be set aside unless there is an abuse of discretion or manifest injustice has been done.

The discretion of the trial court with reference to opening default judgments is a legal one which will be reviewed and corrected if abused or improperly exercised,[20] or if the action of the court is the result of misconception or error as to the law.[21] An appellate court will generally not disturb the trial court's action in setting aside a default where there is room for doubt as to the sufficiency of the excuse for the default;[21.5] and it is only where there is no

Competing considerations considered

In determining whether trial court abused discretion in refusing to strike off default, court must contemplate competing considerations that cases be decided on their merits, that party have his day in court, that rules of practice and procedure be tools in aid of promotion of justice, that litigation be concluded finally and with reasonable dispatch, and that the dilatory shall not be rewarded at the expense of the diligent.

N.H.—Lewellyn v. Follansbee, 47 A. 2d 572, 94 N.H. 111.

Conflicting affidavits

Opening of default will not be reversed on appeal except for clear abuse of discretion where determination of trial court was made on conflicting affidavits.

Minn.—Standard Oil Co. v. King, 55 N.W.2d 710, 238 Minn. 81.

Conflicting evidence

Where the judgment rendered, permitting the opening of a default, is based on conflicting evidence, trial court's discretion will not be controlled unless manifestly abused.

reasonable basis for his order that the action of the trial judge in setting aside a default judgment will be annulled.[21.10]

Since courts universally favor a trial on the merits, no great abuse of discretion is required to warrant the reversal of an order refusing to set aside a default judgment,[21.15] and a slight abuse is sufficient.[21.20] Such being the policy of the appellate court, if the trial court has exercised its discretion to grant relief from a default judgment, the appellate court is particularly reluctant to interfere and will, before doing so, require a much stronger showing of abused discretion than where an opening of the default has been denied.[22] In the latter case the action of the lower court will be carefully and critically scanned,[23] and the appellate court may find

Reasons for rule

"It is the policy of the law that every cause of action should be tried upon its merits; that every party to an action shall have his day in court. Manifestly, therefore appellate courts are more inclined to reverse for a failure to set aside a judgment taken by default or on an ex parte hearing than where such judgment has been set aside and a trial on the merits granted."

an abuse of discretion where it would not have been found had the default been opened.[24] Notwithstanding this, there must be some showing of an abuse of discretion before a refusal to vacate a default judgment will be interfered with;[25] and, on the other hand, there may be an abuse of discretion in opening a default judgment which will cause the appellate court to reverse.[26]

The rule that courts, on a motion to vacate a default judgment, will incline towards granting relief to a party who has not had his opportunity to present his case is ordinarily applied at the trial court level,[26.5] and an appellate court will not reverse the action of the trial court in refusing to open a default judgment if it appears that all the elements were considered, merely because the trial court could have opened the default.[26.10] In order for an appellate court to overturn the trial court's exercise of its discretion in refusing to vacate a valid default judgment when a full opportunity for a fair hearing was afforded, requirements of public policy demand more than a mere statement that a person did not have his day in court.[26.15]

When a default judgment is opened, the crucial question before the appellate court is whether the action of the lower court constituted an abuse of discretion.[26.20]

Presumptions. In accordance with the rule, discussed supra § 1533, that an appellate court will indulge all reasonable presumptions in favor of the correctness of the judgment, order, or decree from which the appeal was taken, the trial judge is presumed not to have abused his discretion in setting aside a default judgment,[26.25] or a decree pro confesso.[26.30]

Burden of showing abuse. The complaining party ordinarily has the burden of showing that the trial court abused its discretion in opening or refusing to reopen a default judgment.[26.35]

Laches. An appellate court will not disturb the trial court's exercise of its discretion in denying a motion to set aside a default where the complaining party was guilty of laches.[26.40]

b. Particular Applications of Rules

The rules applicable to review of the trial court's exercise of its discretion in ruling on a motion or application to vacate or set aside a default judgment have been applied to motions based on various particular grounds.

The principles stated supra subdivision a of this section are often applied where the motion to set aside the default judgment is based on grounds enumerated by statute, such as mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect,[27] or unavoidable casualty or misfortune.[28]

This is illustrated by cases in which the grounds urged for setting aside the default were misapprehension of counsel for defendant based on a statement made by the latter as to the nature of the action;[29] defendant's forgetting the day appointed for trial because busy on other matters;[30] absence of counsel because engaged in a case in another court,[31] or away on a vacation;[32] failure of the secretary of defendant's attorney to file a motion;[32.5] inadvertent failure of the stenographer of defendant's counsel to file the answer where plaintiff's counsel was notified that a defense would be made;[33]

g. Appeal or Other Proceeding for Review

§ 1633. In General

The exercise by the trial court of its discretion as to the allowance and perfecting of appeals or other proceedings for review will not be disturbed on appeal unless there has been a manifest abuse of discretion.

While some latitude must be allowed to the appellate judge in passing on the contents of an appeal record,[40.50] the determination of what should be incorporated in the record on appeal is for the trial court.[40.55] However, the exercise by the trial court of its discretionary powers as to matters pertaining to the allowance and perfecting of appeals or other proceedings for review will not be disturbed by the appellate court in the absence of a manifest abuse of discretion or power.[41] Where an abuse of discretion[42] or an erroneous ruling of law[43] is shown, the appellate court may review and inquire into the actions of the trial court.

Application of the above principle has been made to the rulings of the trial court on an application for leave to appeal after the time therefor has expired, as considered infra § 1640; an application for leave to amend notice to the clerk to prepare papers on appeal;[44] an application for an appeal bond;[45] and the terms and conditions of an appeal bond,[46] its sufficiency,[47] or the amount[47.5] or the amendment[48] thereof.

Appeal before entry of final decree. Except where a clear and flagrant abuse of the discretion of the trial court appears, an appellate court will not review the exercise by the trial court of its discretion in granting or refusing an appeal before the entry of a final decree.[48.5]

Settlement of case. Ordinarily, the only supervision which may be exercised over a trial judge charged with the duty of settling a case on appeal is to see that it is performed.[48.10]

§ 1634. Making and Filing Bill of Exceptions, Case, or Statement

Unless discretion has been abused, the exercise by the trial court of discretion as to the making and filing of a bill of exceptions, case, or statement of facts will not be disturbed on appeal.

Unless discretion has been abused, the exercise by the trial court of discretion as to matters relating to the making and filing of a bill of exceptions, case, or statement of facts, for appeal or review, will not be disturbed on appeal.[49]

Printing of exhibits. Whether exhibits should be printed at length is a matter to be determined in the first instance by the trial judge.[49.5]

§ 1635. Supersedeas or Stay of Proceedings

Discretionary action of the trial court as to a supersedeas or stay will not be disturbed on appeal unless there has been an abuse of discretion or injustice has resulted.

The exercise by the trial court of its discretion with respect to granting, denying, or vacating a supersedeas or stay,[50] or fixing the terms and conditions of a supersedeas bond,[51] will not be interfered with on appeal unless there has been a manifest abuse of discretion or injustice has resulted.

Stay as continuance. Where the trial court stays all proceedings in the cause pending the disposition of an error, the granting of a stay is in effect a continuance and is to be determined in the discretion of the trial court.[51.5]

b. Costs and Fees

§ 1636. In General

An exercise of discretion by the trial court with respect to costs, allowances, or fees is subject to review and correction only if abuse of discretion is clearly shown.

While the granting of costs is discretionary with the trial court and is at least theoretically reviewable, appellate courts seldom concern themselves with the exercise by the lower court of its discretion in this respect.[51.50] The trial court's exercise of the dis-

Discretion of trial court in awarding costs in equity suit see Costs § 10.

"An 'improper' exercise of discretion appears when the record, after indulging all fair intendments in favor of the ruling, discloses the taxation of costs was unjust and unfair."

Ala.—Lucas v. Lucas, 64 So.2d 70, 74, 258 Ala. 515—Dozier v. Payne, 14 So.2d 376, 377, 244 Ala. 476.

More favorable character of judgment offered by defendant

Where, by reason of statute, an offer of judgment by defendant will prevent the recovery of costs unless the judgment recovered is more favorable than that offered, the trial court's discretionary determination of whether the judgment recovered is more favorable than that offered will not be disturbed in the absence of abuse.

Nev.—Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co. v. Balliet, 190 P. 76, 44 Nev. 94.

Stay of proceedings until payment of costs

The trial court's discretion as to whether the case shall proceed to trial before plaintiff has paid costs assessed against him will not be reviewed unless clearly abused.

appeal on a pauper's affidavit without the payment of costs,[54.5] will not be interfered with on appeal unless an abuse of discretion is clearly shown.

On a showing of such abuse, the action of the lower court is subject to review and correction by the appellate court;[55] and the taxation of costs in equity may be varied on appeal as the justice of the case may require.[55.5] If the trial court's action is not the result of an exercise of discretion, but is due to mistake or error of law,[56] or violation of some principle of law,[56.5] it is subject to reversal. An appellate court will not set aside an award of attorney's fees made by the trial court merely because the reviewing court would have allowed more or less than the trial court awarded.[56.10]

Matter of law. Except on an abuse of discretion by the trial judge, the question whether counsel fees should be allowed does not become a matter of law for the determination of an appellate court.[56.15]

§ 1637. Security for Costs

Unless an abuse of discretion is shown, an appellate court will not disturb the exercise by the trial court of its discretion as to security for costs.

i. Miscellaneous Matters

§ 1638. Enforcement of Rules of Court

The discretion of the trial court as to the construction, application, or enforcement of its own rules is not reviewable except for manifest abuse.

Except in cases where it is manifest that there has been an abuse of discretion, the exercise, by a trial court, of its discretion with respect to the construction, interpretation, application, or enforcement of its own rules will not be disturbed on appeal;[63] and it has been held that, although the court should generally uphold and give effect to its own rules, yet if in furtherance of justice it elects to ignore such rules a judgment will not be reversed on that account.[64] Under other authority, where the court wholly disregards its rules for no apparent reason, the reviewing court will uphold and apply them.[65]

Whether or not a waiver by counsel of the requirements of rules shall be recognized is a nonreviewable matter within the discretion of the court.[66]

§ 1639. Imposition of Terms

Except where a palpable abuse of discretion is shown, the imposition of terms as a condition to the discretionary granting of a motion is generally not reviewable.

When the granting or refusing of a motion is largely a matter of discretion, the imposition, by the trial court, of terms as a condition to granting the motion is also a matter of discretion and is not reviewable except for palpable abuse of discretion.[67] This principle has been applied on motions to amend pleadings[68] or file supplemental pleadings,[69]

Filing cost bill

An appellate court will reverse the granting or denying of a motion to extend the time within which a cost bill may be filed, only in case of the trial court's plain abuse of discretion.
Cal.—Soda v. Marriott, 20 P.2d 758, 130 C.A. 589.

refusal to allow, proceedings nunc pro tunc,[83] when within the discretion of the trial court, will be reviewed only in case of an abuse of power.

The same rule applies with respect to the grant or denial of an extension of time in which to appeal,[84] or to file or settle a case,[85] a statement of facts,[86] a bill of exceptions,[87] an assignment of error,[87.5] or a transcript.[88]

Where, however, it is plainly made to appear that there has been an abuse of the judicial discretion, it is the duty of the appellate court to interpose and correct it;[89] and if the trial judge's jurisdiction to sign bills of exceptions has terminated by lapse of time, his action in that respect may be reviewed.[90] Where an order vacating an ex parte order extending the time within which defendant might settle a bill of exceptions was made as a result of an erroneous view of the law, defendant is entitled to a reversal of the vacating order without establishing an abuse of discretion.[90.5]

Extending time for testimony

Where repeated orders are made upon a mere ex parte motion of counsel with no showing of special cause for an extension of time for taking testimony in a chancery cause, as is expressly required by Equity Rules, rule 71, such orders will be reversed for appropriate procedure.

Fla.—Capehart v. Farmers' Bank & Trust Co., 94 So. 864, 84 Fla. 690.

Notice of intention to move for new trial

The court's power to extend the time or fix a new time for serving a notice of intention to move for a new trial is not arbitrary, and may be exercised only upon good cause shown, and its discretion in the use thereof is subject to review.

Serving case on appeal

While the appellate court is loath to interfere in a matter involving the exercise of the trial court's discretion, yet where plaintiff, who recovered judgment, was in no wise prejudiced by the delay, it was held that an order denying defendant's motion to vacate a default in serving case on appeal should be reversed, it appearing that defendant's attorney who had no clerk, was engaged either in trial or appeal work on almost every week day during the month in which case on appeal was to be served.

Sufficiency of pleading. Before a court can be convicted of an abuse of discretion in refusing to permit a purported reply to be filed out of time, it should at least appear that the reply offered is sufficient in law to perform the office of that pleading.[90.10]

§ 1641. Form of Opinion

The form of the opinion of the trial court is not reviewable.

The form in which a trial court shall express its opinion is a matter to be settled by it and is not reviewable by an appellate court.[91]

G. QUESTIONS OF FACT, VERDICTS, AND FINDINGS

1. In General

§ 1642. In General

a. Action at law
b. In equity suit
c. Effect of statutory provisions
d. Mixed questions of law and fact

a. Action at Law

As a general rule, an appellate court will not determine questions of fact in actions at law, but it may consider the sufficiency of the evidence to support or warrant the action of the lower court.

An appellate court is generally limited to the correction of errors of law, and in the absence of constitutional or statutory provisions to the contrary, and except for the purposes and to the extent hereinafter discussed in §§ 1643–1674, questions of fact in actions at law are to be tried and determined in the court of original jurisdiction, and not in an appellate court exercising strictly the functions of a court of review.[92] The probative force of evidence is for the consideration of the triers of the facts

Difficulty of obtaining positive proof

In estimating the probative value of evidence, the appellate court will consider the difficulty of obtaining positive proof.

Mo.—Scott v. American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Co., 173 S.W. 23, 187 Mo. App. 344.

Silence of witness

The weight to be given the silence of a witness and the contention that an answer will incriminate is for the tribunal conducting the trial.

Presumptions as to weight of evidence

Code sections, providing that oral admissions of a party should be viewed with caution, that weak evidence offered, when party has power to offer stronger evidence, should be viewed with distrust, and stating presumption that willfully suppressed evidence, if produced, would be adverse, and presumption that higher evidence would be adverse if inferior evidence is produced, are ordinarily used as a guide for trier of facts and are not considered by appellate courts, except when there is no substantial evidence to support a judgment.

Evidence erroneously stricken

In civil actions, reviewing court may properly consider evidence erroneously stricken by trial court on motion of appellant in determining whether evidence is sufficient to support determination of trial court.

Cal.—People v. Newman, 148 P.2d 4, 24 C.2d 168, 152 A.L.R. 365.

Incompetent evidence

(1) In determining whether findings are supported by evidence, appellate court will not consider whether supporting evidence admitted at trial without objection is either incompetent or hearsay.

Cal.—Weiss v. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Savings Ass'n, 135 P.2d 584, 57 C.A.2d 892.

(2) In suit for return of purchase price of realty on ground of plaintiff's mental incompetence to make purchase, where opinion of specialist who examined plaintiff was based substantially on rejected testimony as to what plaintiff told witness through an interpreter and what witness learned of history of plaintiff's condition from any source, his testimony must also be considered by supreme court as having been stricken in determining sufficiency of evidence to sustain finding of plaintiff's mental incompetence by superior court.

N.H.—Oullette v. Ledoux, 30 A.2d 13, 92 N.H. 302.

(3) In determining the sufficiency of evidence to sustain a verdict, district court of appeal must consider incompetent evidence introduced by the party, who on appeal was asserting that evidence was insufficient.

Cal.—Cox v. City of Los Angeles, 223 P.2d 868, 100 C.A.2d 378.

Interested and disinterested witnesses

In determining sufficiency of evidence to sustain verdict, reviewing court should not disregard testimony of interested witnesses and look to that of disinterested witnesses.

Ill.—Cochran v. Koller, 33 N.E.2d 910, 310 Ill.App. 91.

Hearsay evidence tending to prove a material fact, if admitted without objection, may sustain a finding of the existence of that fact; the probative force of the evidence being for the trial tribunal vested with the function of ascertaining facts.

Neb.—Maul v. Iowa-Nebraska Light & Power Co., 288 N.W. 532, 137 Neb. 128, modified on other grounds inference therefrom[6] to support the fact determined in the lower court, the fact so determined will not and rehearing denied 289 N.W. 767, 137 Neb. 128.

Va.—Tignor v. Virginia Electric & Power Co., 184 S.E. 234, 166 Va. 284.

Inference based on circumstantial evidence

The rule is not that for an inference to be established by circumstantial evidence it must be the only inference which can fairly or reasonably be drawn from the circumstances relied on, or that if other inferences may reasonably be drawn from the facts in evidence, the evidence does not support the inference sought to be deduced from it, the principle being more applicable as a rule to guide a jury in its deliberations on the facts than it is as a rule to guide the appellate court in passing on the sufficiency of the evidence.

Consistency with physical facts and laws of science

(1) It cannot be laid down as a rule of law that plaintiff in a personal injury case cannot recover unless the appellate court can see that every detail of the accident as testified to by plaintiff and his witnesses is consistent with admitted physical facts and laws of science.

Cal.—Austin v. Newton, 189 P. 471, 46 C.A. 493.

(2) In passing on the objection that the verdict for plaintiff is not supported by the evidence because plaintiff's testimony was contrary to the physical facts, the appellate court need examine only plaintiff's evidence, together with the physical facts disclosed.

Mo.—Young v. Dunlap, 190 S.W. 1041, 195 Mo.App. 119.

(3) Attempted demonstration according to law of physics of impossibility of collision between defendant's taxicab and plaintiff's motorcycle occurring in manner testified to by plaintiff's witnesses, which involved acceptance as absolutely accurate testimony of other witnesses as to speed, distances, and relative positions, would not be considered on appeal.

Ill.—Manzeske v. Yellow Cab Co., 54 N.E.2d 239, 322 Ill.App. 280.

(4) On appeal from judgment for plaintiff, plaintiff's testimony that he was driving along the highway when he was struck at night by defendant's automobile would not be disregarded on the ground that had plaintiff been sitting on the seat of his automobile when it was struck, his body would have been crushed and that he suffered no such injuries, where it is just as reasonable to assume that plaintiff was thrown off the seat by the first impulse of the impact.

Cal.—Mahar v. Mackay, 132 P.2d 42, 55 C.A.2d 869.

(5) Appellate courts are reluctant to hold that so-called natural laws must take precedence over testimony of apparently credible witness.

Cal.—Butticci v. Schindel Furniture Co., App., 313 P.2d 62.

Appellate court will not indulge in lengthy and dubious computations to determine that there is a physical impossibility of truth of the evidence supporting the verdict.

matter of law;[14] where it clearly appears that material evidence has been disregarded;[15] where there is an entire lack of evidence either direct or inferential;[16] or where the findings of fact were manifestly influenced by an error of law.[16.5] The appellate court may examine the evidence where such examination is necessary to form a basis for a decision of questions of law on appeal.[17]

It has been held that the reviewing court is not bound by facts determined in the lower court based on uncontradicted[18] or documentary evidence and

Inherently improbable testimony

(1) An appellate court may disregard evidence as inherently impossible.

Me.—Parker v. Knox, 87 A.2d 663, 147 Me. 396—Alpert v. Alpert, 49 A.2d 911, 142 Me. 260.

(2) Evidence that is inherently improbable may be disregarded by reviewing court, but, to warrant such action, there must exist a physical impossibility that such evidence is true or its falsity must be apparent without any resort to inferences or deductions.

Cal.—Postier v. Landau, 262 P.2d 565, 121 C.A.2d 98—Trancoso v. Trancoso, 216 P.2d 172, 96 C.A.2d 797—Pierce v. Pierce, 143 P.2d 948, 61 C.A.2d 694—Poe v. (3) Testimony is not inherently improbable, so as to warrant its rejection by reviewing court, unless things related or described by witness could not have occurred.

Cal.—Postier v. Landau, 262 P.2d 565, 121 C.A.2d 98.

(4) Mere fact that admitted circumstances make story of witnesses seem improbable, will not justify reversal by an appellate tribunal on ground that verdict is contrary to the evidence.

Cal.—Postier v. Landau, supra.

the inferences to be drawn therefrom;[19] but great weight should be given on appeal to the undisputed facts and the probabilities,[20] and it has been said that uncontradicted evidence must be taken as true.[21]

In so far as it is the duty of the appellate court to take judicial notice of ultimate facts or conclusions to be drawn from the record, it must consider the evidence,[22] and may draw the necessary inferences arising therefrom,[23] but not inferences not justified or unnecessary.[24] An appellate court in passing on the sufficiency of evidence to sustain facts found below must not pass beyond the field of probabilities into that of conjecture.[25] The court on appeal may

Witness called by prevailing party

A plaintiff is not bound by testimony elicited from defendant when defendant has been called as witness under code section permitting examination of adversary as on cross-examination.

Cal.—Anthony v. Hobbie, 155 P.2d 826, 25 C.2d 814.

Evidence viewed favorably to prevailing party

Evidence must be considered in its aspects most favorable to prevailing party.

the evidence, except when, and to the extent that, this practice may have been changed by statute.[28] The court on appeal may, in a proper case, draw its own inferences from the testimony,[29] and in weighing the evidence give consideration to appropriate presumptions of law.[30]

c. Effect of Statutory Provisions

Appellate courts, particularly intermediate appellate courts, may be charged by constitutional or statutory provisions with the power or duty to examine the evidence and findings.

The extent of review often depends on the various constitutional or statutory provisions regulating the general powers and duties of appellate courts and appellate proceedings, as well as on the consideration of the inherent nature of the appellate tribunal as distinguished from that of the trial court, where greater opportunities are had for weighing the evidence;[31] and appellate courts, which are in most instances courts of intermediate appellate jurisdiction, are in some jurisdictions authorized and charged with the duty of examining the evidence and findings, on proper exceptions reserved.[32]

Evidence on behalf of defendant, which was evidently rejected by the jury in rendering a verdict for plaintiff, cannot be considered by the reviewing court except in so far as it may be material to questions of law arising on the instructions.
Va.—Payne v. Brown, 112 S.E. 833, 133 Va. 222.

Admissions

(1) Plaintiff cannot ignore his own unequivocal assertions and rely on selected portions of defendant's testimony which was at variance with his own account of accident.
N.H.—Sarkise v. Boston & M. R. R., 186 A. 332, 88 N.H. 178.

(2) On appeal by defendant from judgment for plaintiff, it was duty of supreme court to deem that admissions made by defendant were still a part of the evidence, notwithstanding explanation by defendant's agent who made the admissions.
Or.—Dunning v. Northwestern Elec. Co., 206 P.2d 1177, 186 Or. 379.

Qualification of rule

Rule according to plaintiff the most favorable view of evidence applies only in case of conflict in evidence purporting in its entirety to be vouched for as credible evidence, and not where plaintiff's witness before leaving stand repudiates inconsistencies in testimony and finally stands on but one version of the facts.

In New Jersey

(1) Under present judicial article of constitution providing that supreme court and appellate division of the superior court may exercise "such original jurisdiction as may be necessary to the complete determination of any cause on review," appellate review of matters of fact as well as of law is authorized and limitations on review under the common law writ of error no longer obtain.

§ 1643. Questions of Fact on Motions or Other Interlocutory or Special Proceedings Generally

A determination of fact questions by the court, in the course of a cause, of motions or of other special proceedings will not be disturbed on appeal if the evidence is conflicting or there is evidence to sustain the finding.

When the determination of questions in the course of a cause, of motions or of other special proceedings depends on facts laid before the court, its decision is ordinarily governed by the same rules relating to findings of fact generally, as discussed supra § 1642. If the evidence is conflicting or there is evidence to sustain the findings the appellate court will not interfere[35] unless the finding is clearly erroneous, or so clearly against the evidence or the great weight thereof as to be manifestly wrong.[36] The Conduct of counsel

(1) The justice who presides at the trial properly decides whether erroneous conduct of counsel has been corrected.
N.H.—Wilcomb v. Dustin, 131 A. 596, 82 N.H. 180.

(2) The supreme court is reluctant to reverse because of counsel's remarks in argument, where there is a controversy as to what was said, and the trial court has found against the complaining party.
Iowa.—Iowa Windmill & Pump Co. v. Tobin, 195 N.W. 989.

Nunc pro tunc order

(1) The reviewing court will not disturb a ruling directing or refusing to direct a nunc pro tunc entry, if sustained by any substantial evidence.

(2) Findings of fact of the trial court determining an application for a nunc pro tunc order will not be disturbed on appeal if reasonably supported by competent evidence.
Okl.—In re Peter's Estate, 51 P.2d 272, 175 Okl. 90.

(3) A finding by the trial court, on motion to set aside a nunc pro tunc order, that motion for new trial was not filed during term, is conclusive on appeal.
Ark.—Allen v. Francis, 287 S.W. 182, 171 Ark. 1187.

findings will not be interfered with, although the evidence leaves the facts[37] or conclusion of the lower court[37.5] in doubt. On the other hand, in some jurisdictions the findings of fact and conclusions of law made by the trial court after a hearing on a motion and without a trial on the merits are not binding on appeal.[37.10]

Applications of rule. The foregoing principles have been applied in respect of findings in proceedings preliminary to trial;[38] findings on motion for change of venue and orders granting or denying the motion;[39] findings on motion to require security

However, it is the rule in some jurisdictions that in cases where a preliminary restraining order had been issued and the lower court determined on its continuance or dissolution, the appellate court is not concluded by the findings of the trial judge but has the power to determine for itself the facts on which the decision will properly be made to depend,[58] but even in such a case the reviewing court may refuse to disturb the findings where there is evidence to support them.[59] Likewise, in some jurisdictions the appellate court is not bound by the findings of the trial court on appeal from an order appointing a receiver.[59.5]

The general rule applies as well in proceedings relating to judgment,[60] as findings and orders, setting aside or refusing to set aside default judgments[61]

Burden on appellant

The supreme court on appeal in an injunction proceeding, may review findings of fact, but appellant has the burden to assign and show error.
N.C.—General Talking Pictures Corporation v. Electrical Research Products, 159 S.E. 19, 201 N.C. 143.

Hearing by appellate judges

Under a statute permitting an application to an appellate judge for a temporary injunction after refusal by the circuit court the determination of a motion heard before members of the court of appeals is not necessarily binding on the court of appeals.

Commissioner's finding
Where the record of the commissioner, appointed to take testimony concerning sufficiency of sureties on an appeal bond for fifty thousand dollars, did not disclose substantial error in his finding that the net worth of sureties above exemptions was twenty-seven thousand eight hundred and ten dollars, the supreme court was not justified in overruling the findings and holding that the circuit clerk acted arbitrarily in refusing to approve the bond.

or on allowance as to attorney's fees,[65] or findings on a motion for a new trial;[66] and to findings and orders in proceedings relating to judicial sales.[67]

Where conflicting affidavits are introduced in support of a motion to vacate an award, the action of the court in deciding the motion is, as a general rule, not reviewable on appeal.[68] The determination of questions of fact by the court or jury in awarding dower,[69] or by the commission in assigning it,[70] will not ordinarily be disturbed on appeal unless it is without testimony to support it or against the manifest weight of the evidence. It has been held, however, that the appellate court may weigh the evidence on appeal from a judgment overruling a motion to set aside the satisfaction of an alimony judgment, such a proceeding, although at law, being in the nature of an exercise of equitable jurisdiction.[71]

Based on documentary evidence. While it seems to be the general rule that a determination by the trial court based on conflicting affidavits will not be disturbed on appeal,[72] still it has been held that

No conflict

(1) Where affidavits for opening default alleged that plaintiff and his attorney agreed against trial on a certain day, and plaintiff attorney made a like affidavit, plaintiff's affidavit to the contrary as to his personal agreement did not present such a conflict as to make the finding of the trial court conclusive, the matters denied not being material.
Ind.—Dennis v. Scanlon, 118 N.E. 370, 66 Ind.App. 453.

(2) However, in the absence of substantial conflict in the evidence, an erroneous conclusion of the trial court from the affidavits on file as respects venue will be reversed on appeal.
Cal.—Sherman v. Reynolds, 256 P. 846, 83 C.A. 403.

(3) Where affidavit in support of motion to strike certain defenses as sham and as tending to prejudice a fair trial of action was uncontradicted, appellate court was required to affirm order granting motion.
N.Y.—Stafford v. John W. Cowper Co., 9 N.Y.S.2d 109, second case, 256 App.Div. 894.

Until there is a clear showing of error in the trial court's ruling adverse to defendant on conflicting affidavits on his motion to set aside a default and judgment against him, the supreme court cannot disturb it.
Iowa.—McCabe v. Fluckinger, 172 N. W. 444, 186 Iowa 1351.

Weight

(1) Ruling of trial court on issues of fact raised by conflicting affidavits is entitled, on appeal, to the same weight as a finding on conflicting evidence as to issues of fact.

where the findings of fact by the trial court were made on documentary evidence the rule that the trial judge is better able to weigh the evidence than the appellate court does not apply,[73] and hence, where the reviewing court has all of the papers on which a finding was made, it has been held that it will properly examine them and be governed by the facts thereby disclosed.[74]

The general rule applies where there is either oral or written evidence,[74.5] although the foundation for the general rule is less substantial where all the evidence is documentary than where the determination comes from witnesses whom the trial court sees and hears.[74.10]

§ 1644. Competency of Witnesses and Admissibility of Evidence

The determination by the trial court of preliminary fact questions on which the competency of witnesses or admissibility of evidence depends is generally final.

The determination by the trial court of preliminary questions of fact on which depends the competency of witnesses to testify[75] or the admissibility of evidence[76] is as a general rule final. The decision

Agency

(1) The decision of a trial court on a preliminary question of agency, with respect to admissibility of his declarations in evidence, is ordinarily not reviewable.

Vt.—Ellie J. Gomez & Co. v. Hartwell, 122 A. 461, 97 Vt. 147.

(2) Where the son of defendant had nothing to do with the drilling of the well after the contract was signed by defendant, what was said by plaintiff's agent to him thereafter as to the time of its completion was incompetent to bind defendant, unless the son was agent for him, it being for the judge to decide, as a preliminary matter, whether agency was made out sufficiently, and his decision will not be disturbed, unless clearly wrong.

Mass.—Gray v. Currier, 147 N.E. 567, 252 Mass. 78.

Cause of action

In action against executors for amount of mortgage indebtedness, assumed by testator under deed conveying mortgaged land, located in Florida, to him, competency of evidence offered to establish cause of action is question for trial court, if it appears at trial that defendants are not liable to plaintiff under substantive law of such state.

Mass.—Alropa Corp. v. Bloom, 42 N. E.2d 269, 311 Mass. 442.

Competency of author of statement

The question whether one who had been committed to an insane asylum and not yet discharged had recovered his mental faculties when he made a statement offered in evidence against him was one of fact for the trial court to determine.

Tex.—West Lumber Co. v. Henderson, Civ.App., 238 S.W. 710, modified on other grounds, Com.App., 252 S.W. 1044.

Opinion evidence

Whether opinion evidence should be received is primarily an issue to be passed on by the trial court, the question in the appellate court being whether a reasonable man could find as the trial judge did.

Vt.—Gardner v. Commercial Mach. Co., 111 A. 317, 79 N.H. 452—Ray-of the trial court will be upheld where there is evidence to sustain its findings,[77] although conflicting,[78] or unless the findings are manifestly against the weight of the evidence[79] or clearly erroneous,[80] or founded on an error of law,[81] or unless the trial court has palpably abused its discretion.[82]

This rule has been applied in respect of questions of fact relating to the competency of a witness to testify as an expert,[83] the competency of a nonexmond v. Sheldon's Estate, 104 A. 106, 92 Vt. 396.

Refusal to reopen the case for the introduction of additional evidence on the ground that justice did not require a consideration of the proffered evidence is not subject to review on exceptions, the question being one of fact for the trial court.

N.H.—Manchester Amusement Co. v. Conn, 119 A. 69, 80 N.H. 455.

Similarity of conditions

(1) Whether there was such similarity of conditions as to make evidence of a prior accident of assistance to jury is for the trial justice.

Conn.—Wilkins v. G. Fox & Co., 7 A.2d 434, 125 Conn. 738.

N.H.—Lovett v. Manchester St. Ry., 159 A. 132, 85 N.H. 345.

(2) However, it has also been held that where insurer denied liability on ground that death of insured was result of suicide and not accidental, and beneficiary sought to introduce evidence of certain tests tending to show that insured could not have fired the gun himself, appellate court on review, was required to determine whether the conditions under which the tests were made were so similar in all essential particulars to those originally existing that the results thereof would have probative force.

Ill.—Downing v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 41 N.E.2d 297, 314 Ill. App. 222.

Statutory exception

Under Pub St.1901, c 224 § 17, relating to evidence admissible on transactions with deceased persons, the ruling as to excluding plaintiff's testimony, including the proposition that it did not clearly appear that an injustice would be done thereby, may be excepted to and revised.

Impeachment evidence

Ohio.—Kunkel v. Cincinnati St. Ry. Co., 80 N.E.2d 442, 82 Ohio App. 341.

Testimony of deceased or absent witness

(1) Whether a sufficient predicate was laid for the introduction of testimony of absent witnesses given on a former trial of the case was primarily for trial judge.

Ala.—Liverpool & London & Globe Ins. Co. v. Dickinson, 13 So.2d 570, 244 Ala. 381.

(2) Determination of question whether interest and motive existed for cross-examination at former trial of witness since deceased so as to render admissible such witness' testimony in subsequent action involving same issue is for trial court on models, maps, sketches,[97] or letters,[97.5] or for the admission of secondary evidence.[98]

On the other hand, the determination of a preliminary question of fact on which depends the competency of witnesses or the admissibility of evidence must be set aside where it is clearly shown to be erroneous in matter of law and prejudicial to appellant,[99] where there is no evidence to support it,[1] or where it is against the evidence.[2] It has also been held that the decision of the trial judge as to the qualification of a witness as an expert is reviewable on appeal where all of the evidence on such issue is contained in the bill of exceptions,[3] or where the facts on which the decision of the question depended were undisputed so that the question became one of law.[3.5] Also, in some jurisdictions the determination of whether proof of the loss or destruction of a written instrument is sufficient to render secondary evidence of the contents admissible is reviewable.[3.10]

Procedure in admission. The action of the court in permitting a witness to testify in rebuttal, relating as it does to matters of procedure, is final on appeal as against the objection that such testimony was not in rebuttal.[4]

§ 1645. Credibility of Witnesses

As a general rule the reviewing court will not pass on the credibility of witnesses.

The appellate court will not pass on the credibility of witnesses[5] which is a question solely for the de-inspection of record of former trial, but ruling is subject to review where it appears to have been erroneous or founded on error in law.

Incoherency or inconsistency in testimony goes to the witness' credit, and testimony which is very incoherent or inconsistent should be considered with great caution by the jury; but the court of appeals cannot hold as a matter of law that testimony of one not a party has no probative value merely because self-contradictory.
Ga.—Howard v. Georgia Power Co., 176 S.E. 69, 49 Ga.App. 420.

Partial variances in the testimony of different witnesses, on minute and collateral points, are of little importance unless they are of too prominent and striking a nature to be ascribed to mere inadvertence, inattention or defect of memory.

Motion for new trial

Contradictions in plaintiff's testimony were for consideration by trial court on plaintiff's motion for new trial after jury's verdict for defendants, not by appellate court, on appeal from order granting such motion.

(3) Offer of forged documents in evidence for minors, suing by their mother as next friend to establish their rights of inheritance as the testator's illegitimate sons, is not such fraud as to require the supreme court to disbelieve all of plaintiffs' testimony, even if it rendered the mother unworthy of credit, where the remaining evidence strongly corroborated the main facts to which she testified.

ly contradicted.[17] It has been held that the rule is applicable whether the witness testified orally or largely by affidavit;[18] on the other hand it has been held inapplicable as to evidence of a witness brought into the case by affidavit or deposition alone, where such papers are before the appellate court.[19]

Nevertheless, while granting uniform adherence to the rule that appellate courts will not weigh evidence or pass on the credibility of witnesses, the rule does not require courts to accord probative value to that which is so palpably false or absurd that no reasonable mind would give it any credence; and it is within the province of the reviewing court to ascertain whether or not testimony has any evidentiary strength, and to cast it aside if found to be inherently false.[20]

Credibility of improbable or implausible testimony was for trier of facts and not appellate court.

On documents
A chancellors' findings as to the credibility of witnesses may be reversed on appeal as erroneous, where based on evidence which, as to the principal issue, is chiefly documentary and opinion evidence, and the original documents are certified to the appellate court and where from such evidence it is apparent that the decree is palpably erroneous.

Credibility considered

(1) The supreme court would give little credence to testimony of complainant who in the original bill sought to set aside a deed to his son and daughter-in-law upon the theory of fraud, and in an amended bill sought relief on the theory that the deed was conveyed in consideration of support, where the alleged facts of the amended bill were known to complainant at the time of filing of the original bill which was denied by answer.
Ill.—Stasch v. Stasch, 189 N.E. 891, 355 Ill. 581.

(2) Where visibility was poor, the appellate court could not say that a truck driver's testimony that he looked and could not see an approaching freight car was false, nor that, if the driver looked around the curtain, he would have discovered the danger.
Cal.—Sheets v. Southern Pac. Co., 299 P. 71, 212 C. 509.

(3) Where defendant real estate broker, charged with fraud in the matter of a contract for an exchange of real property, denied in his answer that the person who held the title to the property for which complainant contracted to exchange his property was a mere dummy for defendant, and further denied that any such admission was made by him on the hearing of a previous suit against defendant for specific performance, much credence cannot, on defendant's appeal from a decree for complainant, be placed on defendant's testimony that, prior to the signing of the contract for the exchange, he told complainant that he (defendant) was the actual owner of the property which complainant was to receive.
Ill.—Brdar v. Kamenjarin, 269 Ill. App. 351.

(4) Appellate court will not deny credence to testimony merely because such testimony was given by a witness friendly to, or called by, one of the parties.
La.—Buckalew v. Brockner, App., 11 So.2d 720.
N.J.—James v. Federal Ins. Co., 73 A.2d 720, 5 N.J. 21.

(5) Where two days after hearing of cause in supreme court appellant addressed letter to each of the five judges who heard the appeal wherein appellant claimed to have been unfairly treated by the trial judge, criticised the conduct of the case by his attorneys, stated, as facts, matters not appearing of record and attempted to demonstrate by argument that he had been damaged, the attempt of appellant to thus surreptitiously secure an unfair advantage in the supreme court affected his credibility and impaired weight of testimony he gave on his own behalf in the court below.
Wash.—Tyree v. Gosa, 119 P.2d 926, 11 Wash.2d 572.

Contradiction by physical or incontrovertible facts

(1) Appellate court will give credence to testimony accepted by trier of facts, unless physical facts or incontrovertible facts refute or contradict such testimony.
Ark.—American Republic Life Ins. Co. v. Presson, 227 S.W.2d 969, 216 Ark. 771.

Ohio.—Gibbons v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 109 N.E.2d 511, 92 Ohio App. 87.

(2) So, where a witness' testimony is corroborated by the physical facts and, in some instances, by the testimony of defendant, appellate court is unable to say that witness' testimony is unreasonable.
La.—Pancoast v. Cooperative Cab Co., App., 37 So.2d 452—Wise v. Villere Coal Co., App., 11 So.2d 419, rehearing refused 11 So.2d 657—Tassin v. Downs, App., 190 So. 232.

(3) However, in an action for injuries in an automobile accident, a verdict for plaintiff would be sustained notwithstanding inconsistencies with admitted physical facts, where the accident could have been caused by the negligent act complained of.
Cal.—Hughes v. Quackenbush, 37 P. 2d 99, 1 C.A.2d 349.

Impossible or improbable testimony

(1) Appellate courts are not vested with authority to pass on credibility of witnesses unless their testimony amounts to an assertion of the impossible or inherent improbability.
Cal.—Sherman v. Panno, 277 P.2d 80, 129 C.A.2d 375—Gilmore v. Hoffman, 266 P.2d 833, 123 C.A.2d 313—Shiya v. Reviea, 264 P.2d 190, 122 C.A.2d 155—Schouten v. Mont.—Hankins v. Waitt, 189 P.2d 666, 120 Mont. 596.

(2) To warrant rejection of statements given by witness who has been believed by trial court, there must exist either a physical impossibility that they are true, or their falsity must be apparent without resorting to inferences or deductions.
Cal.—De Felice v. Tabor, App., 308 P.2d 377—New v. New, App., 306 P.2d 987—In re Moore's Estate, 300 P.2d 110, 143 C.A.2d 64—In re Reed's Estate, 282 P.2d 935, 132 C.A.2d 732—Kahn v. (3) Fact that it was highly improbable that accident occurred as plaintiff testified it did, did not authorize reviewing court to reject plaintiff's version of accident.
Tenn.—Dixon Stave & Heading Co. v. Archer, App., 291 S.W.2d 603—DeRossett v. Malone, 239 S.W.2d 366, 34 Tenn.App. 451.

Mass.—Campbell v. Ashler, 70 N.E. 2d 302, 320 Mass. 475.

Perjury or clear mistake

(1) On appeal, appellate court is not bound to believe a mere witness in a case when it appears from conclusive physical facts or otherwise patently that such witness is either perjured or clearly mistaken.
Ariz.—Motors Ins. Corp. v. Rhoton, 236 P.2d 739, 72 Ariz. 416—Cope v. Southern Pac. Co., 185 P.2d 772, 66 Ariz. 197.

(2) It is duty of appellate court not to seek perjury in witnesses' testimony, but to endeavor to harmonize apparent inconsistencies in their statements.
Cal.—Dickinson v. Pacific Greyhound Lines, 131 P.2d 401, 55 C.A.2d 824.

(3) Reversal of a judgment on the ground of asserted perjury cannot be ordered except in those cases where the testimony is such as to shock the moral sense of the court, and the testimony must be incredible.
Cal.—Hicks v. Ocean Shore R. R., 117 P.2d 850, 18 C.2d 773.

The reviewing court will not give much credence to the testimony of a witness who prevaricates in open court and who is defiant in refusing to give answers.[20.5] On the other hand, the reviewing court cannot control a finding or conclusion denying credence, unless it appears that there are no matters or circumstances which impair the accuracy of the testimony.[20.10] Furthermore, the appellate court is not bound by the findings of the trial court where there appears to be no serious question of credibility or veracity which should be left to its better determination.[20.15]

Silence or evasiveness. It has been held that the appellate court has the same right to draw conclusions from the silence or evasiveness of witnesses as has the trial court.[21]

Interested witnesses. The jury, or trial court in the absence of a jury, is the exclusive judge of the credibility of an interested or biased witness,[22] and

Testimony incredible

(1) An appellate court is not required to accept testimony of a witness which is incredible or inherently incredible.

Ind.—Indian Creek Coal & Mining Co. v. Hebert, 131 N.E. 422, 76 Ind. App. 108.

Va.—Bell v. Kenney, 23 S.E.2d 781, 181 Va. 24.

(2) Contradictions and inconsistencies in defendant's testimony do not stamp testimony as inherently incredible.

Cal.—Jones v. Re-Mine Oil Co., 119 P.2d 219, 47 C.A.2d 832.

(3) Appellate court will seldom declare testimony incredible which the trial court has considered credible.

Wis.—Auer v. Johnson, 45 N.W.2d 696, 258 Wis. 223—George M. Danke Co. v. Marten, 255 N.W. 121, 215 Wis. 470.

(4) Although a witness who is found to testify falsely in something material may be disbelieved entirely, rule is not of such compulsion as to negative as incredible that which trier of facts finds to be true.

N.Y.—Bergman v. Greenwich Sav. Bank, 74 N.Y.S.2d 638.

(5) Testimony held not incredible or inherently incredible.

Va.—Bell v. Kenney, 23 S.E.2d 781, 181 Va. 24.

W.Va.—Reall v. Deiriggi, 34 S.E.2d 253, 127 W.Va. 662.

Uncontradicted evidence

(1) Uncontradicted testimony will be accepted as true by appellate court.

(2) Appellate courts, without sufficient reason, will not permit uncontradicted testimony of a witness to be discarded or disregarded arbitrarily or capriciously.

Cal.—Watwood v. Steur, 201 P.2d 460, 89 C.A.2d 620—Barth v. Adelstein, 152 P.2d 498, 66 C.A.2d 406—Burdock v. Wittich, 116 P.2d 90, 46 C.A.2d 456.

Although uncontradicted

Credibility of interested witnesses even though their testimony is uncontradicted when contradiction is impossible and its truthfulness or accuracy open to a reasonable doubt is exclusively for the jury.

N.Y.—Mercatante v. City of New York, 142 N.Y.S.2d 473, 286 App. Div. 265, reargument and appeal denied 144 N.Y.S.2d 914, 286 App. Div. 964.

Determination of interest

(1) It is the function of the jury to determine whether the witnesses were interested or disinterested and the amount of weight which should be given to their testimony.

Ill.—Krug v. Armour & Co., 80 N.E. 2d 386, 335 Ill.App. 222.

(2) It has been held that the rule that competency of witness cannot be raised for first time in appellate court does not prevent such court from giving proper consideration to interest of witness in weighing his evidence.

Ill.—In re Teehan's Estate, 4 N.E. 2d 513, 287 Ill.App. 58.

Disregarding biased witness

The jury determines the credibility of the witnesses, and they may disregard the testimony of an unimpeached and uncontradicted witness it has been said that, as a general rule, the appellate court cannot reverse and render judgment on the testimony of an interested witness alone.[23]

Opinion testimony. The credibility of expert and nonexpert witnesses giving opinion testimony is generally considered to be for the fact-finding body and not for the reviewing court.[24] However, the court will, under particular circumstances, reëxamine expert testimony.[25] Thus, the reviewing court is not bound by the conclusions of a witness who does not give the facts supporting such conclusion, especially when it is one bearing on, controlling, or determining the ultimate question in the case.[26] Furthermore, it has been held that a judge of the appellate court is not bound by the expert evidence in a case below as to the reasonableness of attorney's fees.[27]

In equity cases, although the entire record comes up for determination de novo, the appellate court will, if possible, defer to the determination of the chancellor or trial judge on matters affecting the credibility of witnesses who appeared before him.[28] because of interest or bias shown by the witness or because the manner of testifying raises a doubt as to the truth, so that such evidence does not warrant a conclusion by appellate court contrary to the verdict.

Tex.—Pope v. Beauchamp, 219 S.W. 447, 110 Tex. 271.

Jury question
In an action by a buyer to recover oil well drilling equipment from contractors foreclosing a lien thereon for a claim against the seller, the judgment would not be reversed and rendered for the buyer on appeal because of error in excluding testimony of the seller and his wife that the contractors' debt had been paid, since they were interested witnesses whose testimony presented a jury question.

In an action for damages caused by the breaking of a municipal aqueduct, opinion evidence of the city's experts that the aqueduct was constructed according to standard engineering practice was not conclusive on the appellate court, it being both proper and essential to examine opinions in the light of physical circumstances and prior history of the area involved.

Where the case was tried without a jury and, therefore, was considered on appeal as a suit of an equitable nature, due regard will be given to the opportunity of the trial court to judge the credibility of witnesses.[28.5]

The rule that the court may disturb the conclusion of the trial court as to the credibility of a witness whose testimony is manifestly erroneous does not apply in all of its force where a party is estopped to claim that the witness is unworthy of credit because of having called him as his own witness.[29]

§ 1646. Number of Witnesses

An appellate court will not disturb a verdict or finding merely because the testimony of a majority of the witnesses is against it.

A verdict or finding will not be disturbed on appeal, although the testimony of a majority of the witnesses is against it, at least, if the circumstances do not render improbable the truth of the supporting testimony.[30] This circumstance does not necessarily

Credibility considered

On appeal in a chancery case, reviewing court will not substitute its judgment as to credibility of witnesses where there is nothing such as documentary evidence, self-contradiction, or irreconcilable impeachment, or testimony to the contrary of which court should take judicial notice or matter to overcome the presumption of correctness of the judgment.

Tenn.—Hall v. Britton, App., 292 S.W.2d 524.

Credibility not involved

Court of appeals may determine whether witnesses were mistaken, as found by chancellor on testimony in record, their credibility not being involved.

Peculiarly for trial judge render the verdict or finding against the weight of evidence.[31] If the rule were otherwise, it has been said that "every case would depend upon which side could obtain the greater number of witnesses,"[32] and the opinion of the reviewing court would be substituted for that of a tribunal established by law for the purpose of arriving at the facts.[33]

It has been held, however, that, if testimony of the party on whom rests the general burden of proof is overwhelmingly outweighed as to the number of credible witnesses opposed to his testimony, verdict for him may be set aside;[34] and it seems that a verdict against the numerical weight of testimony may be set aside, when such weight is supported by circumstances.[35]

§ 1647. Conclusiveness in General

a. In general
b. When reviewable

a. In General

Generally, the appellate court cannot invade the province of the jury with respect to determining the facts, and the verdict of the jury as dependent on the evidence is ordinarily taken as conclusive on the appellate court.

As a general rule, the jury and not the appellate court determines the facts of the case,[35.50] and the appellate court cannot invade the province of the jury in this respect.[35.55] Akin to, and perhaps growing out of, the rule requiring the reviewing court on appeal to take the view of the evidence most favorable to the verdict, and give to it the strongest probative force of which it will admit, as stated supra § 1562(4), is the rule more broadly stated, but subject without doubt to the qualifications indicated hereinafter, that ordinarily on appeal the verdict or findings of a jury will be taken as conclusive and will not be reviewed in the appellate court,[36] in the absence of errors of law which have

Plaintiff as witness

(1) Fact that plaintiff relied solely on his own testimony to support his contention did not per se render evidence insufficient as matter of law to support verdict for plaintiff, there being nothing in record to suggest that in accepting plaintiff's testimony jury were actuated by passion or prejudice or considerations outside the evidence.

Fla.—Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. McIntosh, 198 So. 92, 144 Fla. 356.

(2) Plaintiff's failure to take witness stand did not require reversal of judgment for plaintiff for injuries, where the injuries admittedly affected plaintiff's mind and speech mechanism.

N.Y.—Witkin v. Charles D. Beckwith, Inc., 264 N.Y.S. 160, 238 App.Div. 328, affirmed 189 N.E. 697, 263 N.Y. 560.

Fact that testimony strongly tends to support the contentions of defendant is no ground for reversing a judgment for plaintiff, since the jury may not have believed such testimony.

Mass.—Hilden v. Naylor, 111 N.E. 848, 223 Mass. 290.

Answers to interrogatories

(1) Jury's answers to interrogatories must be accepted by appellate court where it cannot say from reading of record that answers are untrue.

Ind.—Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Relias, 185 N.E. 319, 99 Ind.App. 115.

(2) Where there is real or apparent discrepancy in jury's answers to special questions, reviewing court has duty to examine answers and general verdict with view of harmonizing them.

Kan.—Sluss v. Brown-Crummer Inv. Co., 64 P.2d 23, 145 Kan. 12.

Jury's finding pursuant to instructions requested by both parties is conclusive on appeal.

Ark.—Pyramid Life Ins. Co. v. Belmont, 7 S.W.2d 32, 177 Ark. 564.

Where findings of fact are based on records of former proceedings in the district court, there can be no question concerning the facts.

Utah.—Franklin v. Thatcher, 178 P. 922, 53 Utah 397.

Speculation

Appellate court has not the power or insight to analyze and speculate on the processes by which the jury arrive at their conclusions.

Iowa.—Hanna v. Central States Electric Co., 232 N.W. 421, 210 Iowa 864.

Tex.—City Transp. Co. of Dallas v. Vatsures, Civ.App., 278 S.W.2d 373, error dismissed—Hopkins v. Gunter Hotel Corp., Civ.App., 147 S.W. 2d 973, error dismissed, judgment correct.

Time for deliberation

Ordinarily, time consumed by jury in its deliberation is no criterion in determining merits of case especially if issue is narrow and simple one.

R.I.—Mahoney v. Smith, 78 A.2d 798, 78 R.I. 56.

In absence of motion for new trial

Where plaintiffs made no motion for new trial after unanimous verdict for defendant, so that supreme court has not the benefit of trial judge's views, great weight must be given to the jury's conclusions.

La.—Mequet v. Algiers Mfg. Co., 84 So. 904, 147 La. 364.

Rule relaxed

Appellate court will scrutinize a verdict more critically and interfere more readily where the result is to deprive the owner of the control of his property than in any other case.

Iowa.—Zander v. Cahow, 206 N.W. 90, 200 Iowa 1258.

Acceptance of appellee's evidence

(1) On appeal, appellee's version of facts is accepted.

Ind.—F. W. Woolworth Co. v. Moore, 48 N.E.2d 644, 221 Ind. 490—Craig v. Citizens Trust Co., 26 N.E.2d 1006, 217 Ind. 434.

Ky.—Ashland Dry Goods Co. v. Wages, 195 S.W.2d 312, 302 Ky. 577.

Tex.—Sellman v. American Nat. Ins. Co., Civ.App., 281 S.W.2d 150, error dismissed—Thornton v. Downes, 14 S.E.2d 345, 177 Va. 451.

(2) Appellate court must reject all evidence favorable to appellant and consider only the facts tending to sustain the verdict, and, if the verdict has been arrived at in an honest and impartial effort to reach the truth, cannot set it aside.

Cal.—Koon v. Sher, 220 P.2d 784, 98 C.A.2d 530.

Ind.—Northwestern Transit v. Wagner, 61 N.E.2d 591, 223 Ind. 447.

Tex.—Farmers' and Merchants' Gin Co. v. Simmons, Civ.App., 178 S.W. 621.

(3) In determining sufficiency of evidence to support a jury finding, appellate court will disregard evidence tending to support a conclusion contrary to the finding where such evidence is contradicted either directly or by inference, or if, when viewed in light of record of the case, been committed by the trial court[37] prejudicial to the complaining party.[38]

Generally, the function of the court on appeal, with respect to findings of fact by a jury, is to determine whether there is credible evidence fairly tending to support the verdict,[38.5] and the court is with-it possesses inherent infirmities which destroy its probative value, but testimony of a disinterested unimpeached witness may not be wholly disregarded where such testimony contains no inconsistencies, is uncontradicted, and not improbable.

Tex.—Houston Fire & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Biber, Civ.App., 146 S.W.2d 442, error dismissed, judgment correct.

(4) In determining sufficiency of evidence to sustain verdict for plaintiff on appeal by defendant, which introduced evidence after denial of its motion for directed verdict at close of plaintiff's evidence in chief, supreme court must look to whole evidence, not merely that offered by plaintiff, and accept as true all facts and proper inferences therefrom calculated to sustain verdict.

Ind.—Indiana Ins. Co. v. Handlon, 24 N.E.2d 1003, 216 Ind. 442.

Based on circumstantial evidence

(1) Notwithstanding the verdict in an action for contamination of plaintiff's well by sewage which escaped from alleged defective tile joints in a city sewer must necessarily rest on circumstantial evidence, that is no reason for disturbing it.

Iowa.—Hemminger v. City of Des Moines, 203 N.W. 822, 199 Iowa 1302.

(2) Before the appellate court will sustain a verdict for plaintiff, supported solely by circumstantial evidence, the circumstances shown must tend, in an appreciable degree, to establish plaintiff's theory.

Ga.—Radcliffe v. Maddox, 165 S.E. 841, 45 Ga.App. 676.

(3) A judgment on jury's verdict, reasonably sustained by circumstantial evidence and reasonable inferences therefrom, will not be set aside on appeal.

Okl.—Thompson v. Vanpool, 210 P.2d 370, 202 Okl. 92.

Tex.—Barry v. Patterson, Civ.App., 225 S.W.2d 864.

Based on opinion evidence

(1) Where a verdict based on opinion evidence does not commend itself to the court as reasonable or sound, it will not be given the weight accorded to a verdict resting upon inferences drawn from facts, as distinguished from mere opinions.

Wis.—Krueger v. Chase, 177 N.W. 510, 172 Wis. 163.

(2) A verdict based on witnesses' opinions is not accorded the same sanctity as a verdict based on facts, which will rarely be disturbed.

Ky.—Kentucky Hydroelectric Co. v. Reister, 287 S.W. 357, 216 Ky. 303.

Dispute as to signature

As the members of an appellate court cannot be tested as to their qualification to pass, as experts, upon a disputed signature, they cannot determine, from a comparison of writings, that the finding of the jury that a disputed signature was not that of defendant was unauthorized.

Mo.—Sturdivant Bank v. Wright, 168 S.W. 355, 184 Mo.App. 164.

Bona fides of transaction

Jury findings on the bona fides of transaction cannot be disturbed by the appellate court on general grounds only.

Other statements of function

(1) It is not the province of the supreme court to weigh the probative force and effect of the evidence, and the only matter open for review is the question whether or not there is substantial evidence to support the verdict and judgment.

out power to substitute its judgment of the facts for that of the jury.[38.10] A verdict may, however, be set aside on appeal where the evidence is clearly insufficient as a matter of law, as discussed in subdivision b of this section; and in some jurisdictions appellate courts, in a measure, not only examine the evidence, but determine on its weight and sufficiency, the duty of passing on the facts as such being confined to certain courts of intermediate appellate jurisdiction in several of the states, and their power to reverse on the facts is not confined to cases where there is no evidence to support the verdict.[39]

The general rule as to the conclusiveness on appeal of a verdict or finding supported by evidence has been stated by the courts in many different forms.[39.5]

Better qualification

(1) Jurors who have been privileged to observe the witnesses and to mark their demeanor on direct and cross-examination and under questioning of the court are better qualified to separate truth from falsity than are judges who later examine the record for errors.

It is function of appellate court to determine whether the jury was within its province in ruling as it did under the law and the evidence.
Iowa.—Hanna v. Central States Electric Co., 232 N.W. 421, 210 Iowa 864.

Verdict of a jury creates no absolute right, but a verdict is subject to appellate review.

Thus, it has been variously stated, either directly or in effect, that the verdict or the findings of the jury will not be disturbed or will be taken as conclusive: Where the case was properly submitted to the jury and where no errors were committed in the rulings or in the instructions of the trial court;[40]

Particular statements

(1) A judgment on facts will not be disturbed on appeal unless all competent and credible evidence constrains a different conclusion.

Kan.—In re Ward's Estate, 285 P.2d 1081, 178 Kan. 366.

(2) A jury's verdict should not be overturned by appellate court, unless good legal reason therefor is shown.

Ala.—Montgomery City Lines v. Hawes, 20 So.2d 536, 31 Ala.App. 564, certiorari denied 20 So.2d 541, 246 Ala. 287—Lamar Life Ins. Co. v. Kemp, 1 So.2d 760, 30 Ala.App. 138.

(3) It is not duty of supreme court to disturb jury's verdict unless jury was influenced by some matter not appearing in record.

Fla.—Fort Orange Co. v. O'Neal, 189 So. 685, 138 Fla. 325.

(4) A verdict may be set aside only where it is not possible to frame a judgment in accordance therewith when and as construed with the pleadings.

Ga.—Calhoun v. Babcock Bros. Lumber Co., 30 S.E.2d 872, 198 Ga. 74.

(5) Unless finding is arbitrary, it will not be disturbed as contrary to evidence.

Ark.—Old American Ins. Co. v. Hartsell, 4 S.W.2d 25, 176 Ark. 666.

(6) Argumentative exceptions, based on facts submitted to, and decided by, jury, must be overruled by supreme court.

S.C.—Porter-Constructors v. Dixon Motor Service Co., 172 S.E. 419, 171 S.C. 396.

(7) The verdict determines the facts and precludes consideration of them on appeal except in their relation to the course of the trial.

Ark.—Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Jenkins, 82 S.W.2d 15, 190 Ark. 930.

(8) The court of appeals does not have as much discretion as the trial court in setting aside verdicts and granting new trials.

Little evidence needed

(1) Where the successor to the director general of railroads claimed, on appeal from a judgment for plaintiff in an action for delay and negligent handling of cattle, that there was no evidence that the carrier received the cattle, but the fact, easily disproved, was not disproved, little evidence is required to uphold the verdict and judgment.

Tex.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Bostick, Civ.App., 233 S.W. 112.

(2) While neither expert witness nor the jurors may be permitted to conjecture as to what may possibly ensue from a given state of facts, and the witness must be confined, and verdict based on reasonable probabilities, it is the jury's province to pass on the facts and the witnesses' credibility, and the appellate court cannot disturb the finding, however slight the probative force of the testimony in its support may have.

Tex.—Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Jimenez, Civ.App., 267 S.W. 752.

Verdict supported to any appreciable degree

In a case where plaintiff's evidence to any appreciable degree supports the verdict of a jury on the question of negligence, the supreme court of appeals will not disturb the verdict on the ground that no negligence has been shown on the part of defendant.

W.Va.—Kidwell v. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co., 117 S.E. 781, 94 W.Va. 131.

Ark.—De Queen & E. R. Co. v. Dye, 58 S.W.2d 955, 187 Ark. 219.

Mich.—Emery v. Ford, 207 N.W. 856, 234 Mich. 11.

Disparity

The jury are the arbiters of fact questions, and because losing party introduces more evidence than prevailing party will not invalidate a verdict if there is some competent evidence to support jury's finding.

Ga.—Southern Ry. Co. v. Lunsford, 194 S.E. 602, 57 Ga.App. 53, certiorari denied 59 S.Ct. 78, 305 U.S. 619, 83 L.Ed. 395.

When rule inapplicable

(1) Although a verdict will not be disturbed where there is some evidence tending to support it, that rule does not apply where verdict is opposed to undisputed physical facts.

Neb.—Parish v. County Fire Ins. Co., 279 N.W. 170, 134 Neb. 563, 126 A. L.R. 703.

(2) The rule of the foregoing case does not apply where there is a reasonable dispute as to the pertinent physical facts.

Verdict for defendant or plaintiff

The rule applies with equal force to verdicts in favor of a defendant as well as to those in favor of a plaintiff.

4 C.J. p 853 note 60.

Evidence not incredible

(1) Proof of the physical condition of motor vehicles after a collision was held not so inconsistent with plaintiff's explanation of the collision as to the positions of the vehicles just before the collision as to justify setting aside the verdict on the ground that statements by witnesses were wholly incredible.

Wis.—Stewart v. Meyer, 247 N.W. 316, 211 Wis. 347.

(2) A buyer's testimony that the seller's salesman agreed to return and conduct an advertising campaign to sell insecticide could not be disregarded by the court as obviously incredible.

Ark.—Wizard, Inc., v. Feldman, 49 S.W.2d 361, 185 Ark. 752.

Physical facts

(1) To justify setting aside the verdict, it is not enough that the physical facts support one claim more strongly than the other, but the physical facts must be such as to render the evidence supporting the opposite claim incredible.

Wis.—Stewart v. Meyer, 247 N.W. 316, 211 Wis. 347.

(2) A verdict in favor of plaintiff on substantial evidence which, if believed, warranted a verdict for plaintiff, could not be interfered with on ground that testimony was contrary to physical laws and facts of common knowledge.

Mo.—McNicholas v. Continental Baking Co., App., 112 S.W.2d 849.

(3) Where there is a reasonable dispute as to pertinent physical facts of a case, conclusions to be drawn therefrom are for the jury, and a verdict based thereon will not be disturbed unless clearly wrong.

not be disturbed on appeal; and under this rule, evidence which will convince reasonable men of its truth is substantial evidence in support of the verdict, while evidence is not substantial if all reasonable men must conclude that it does not establish the case.[54.5] Moreover, the court will not review the evidence, on appeal, where the verdict is reasonably supported by the evidence;[55] where the ver-

Neb.—Moore v. Krejci, 297 N.W. 913, 139 Neb. 562.

(4) Verdicts would not be set aside as contrary to the established physical facts, where the "physical facts" on which plaintiffs relied were not definitely established and plaintiffs' contentions with respect thereto were based either on assumptions not supported by the evidence, or on a view of the evidence, which the jury did not accept.

R.I.—McAllister v. Chase, 13 A.2d 690, 65 R.I. 122.

Unusual circumstances

Although a reviewing court will not uphold a judgment or verdict based on evidence inherently improbable, testimony, which merely discloses unusual circumstances, does not come within that category.

Cal.—De Felice v. Tabor, App., 308 P.2d 377—New v. New, App., 306 P.2d 987.

54.5 Mont.—Adami v. Murphy, 164 P.2d 150, 118 Mont. 172—Coolidge v. Meagher, 46 P.2d 684, 100 Mont. 172—Morton v. Mooney, 33 P.2d 262, 97 Mont. 1.

Wash.—Rettinger v. Bresnahan, 257 P.2d 633, 42 Wash.2d 631.

Other meanings

(1) Generally, any "reasonable evidence" will be regarded as "substantial evidence" supporting a verdict.

Ark.—Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Hancock, 113 S.W.2d 489, 195 Ark. 414.

(2) "Substantial evidence" means also "competent evidence."

Mo.—Mississippi Valley Trust Co. v. Begley, 275 S.W. 540, 310 Mo. 287.

(3) "Substantial evidence" does not necessarily mean direct evidence, and a fact may be proved by circumstances.

Ark.—Arkmo Lumber Co. v. Luckett, 143 S.W.2d 1107, 201 Ark. 140.

(4) The uncorroborated testimony of a litigant in whose favor a verdict is rendered is substantial within rule that a verdict supported by "substantial evidence" must be approved by the supreme court.

Ark.—Ocker v. Nix, 155 S.W.2d 58, 202 Ark. 1064.

(5) Where the testimony relates to matters, situations, and conditions which might or might not have existed, the evidence in regard thereto is of a substantial character, and, if believed by the jury, is sufficient to support the verdict.

Ark.—Fair Store No. 32 v. Hadley Milling Co., 229 S.W. 727, 148 Ark. 209.

What constitutes

(1) The clause, "evidence reasonably tending to support verdict," means evidence that is competent, relevant, and material, and which to a rational and an impartial mind naturally leads, or involuntarily tends to lead, to a conclusion for which there is a valid, just, and substantial reason.

Okl.—Kelly v. Oliver Farm Equipment Sales Co., 36 P.2d 888, 169 Okl. 269.

(2) The clause, "where there is evidence reasonably tending to support a verdict," means competent, relevant, and material evidence which to a rational and an impartial mind naturally leads to a verdict for which there is a just and substantial reason, and not one based upon unfounded suspicion or which is the result of mere chimerical conjecture.

Okl.—Tate v. Coalgate State Bank, 180 P. 687, 72 Okl. 276.

Where there is evidence tending to support the verdict, the reviewing court will not set it aside.

Okl.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Rutledge, 47 P.2d 83, 173 Okl. 245.

4 C.J. p 853 note 61 [b].

Court will determine, when reviewing the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict, only whether there is evidence fairly tending to support the verdict.

No other verdict possible

Rule that a judgment will not be reversed on appeal if there is substantial evidence to support verdict on any theory on which verdict might have been reached applies to case in which no other verdict is possible as a matter of law.

Cal.—Clement v. State Reclamation Bd., Sacramento San Joaquin Drainage Dist., 220 P.2d 897, 35 C. 2d 628.

Alternate theories

(1) Where the jury's verdict could have been based on either of two theories, the appellate courts will not look behind the verdict to ascertain the theory adopted by the jury.

Cal.—Schultheiss v. Los Angeles Ry. Corporation, 54 P.2d 49, 11 C.A.2d 525.

(2) It has been held, however, that evidence is insufficient to sustain verdict on any one of several theories on which issue of fact is submitted to jury, verdict must be set aside where it is impossible to determine on which theory verdict is based, unless it conclusively appears that verdict is right as matter of law on one or more of such theories.

and a verdict should not be overthrown merely because the jury might rationally have decided otherwise, or would have been authorized to return a different verdict.[59.5]

It has also been said that the judgment of the jury on the facts will not be disturbed on appeal where reasonable men might have found the verdict from the evidence;[60] where the findings were not such as could not have been reached by reasonable men;[61] where the reviewing court cannot say from the entire testimony that intelligent men could not have honestly arrived at the same conclusion;[62] where the evidence does not so preponderate against the verdict as to show that the jury were not governed by the evidence;[63] where the evidence introduced by the prevailing party is worthy of belief on any reasonable view of it, and is neither intrinsically improbable nor uncorroborated;[64] or where the evidence is such as to leave the mind in doubt.[65]

Rule guiding jury inapplicable to appellate court

The principle of law that, if the probabilities are equally balanced on the issue whether the accident involved was produced by a cause for which defendant was responsible, plaintiff must fail is more applicable to guide the jury in its deliberations

Another formulation of the rule is that the appellate court may not interfere with the jury's determination of fact where there is any evidence,[66] and where such evidence as presented by the respec-on the facts than as a rule to guide the appellate court as to the sufficiency of evidence.

findings of fact of the jury;[71] or where the trial court would not have been justified in directing a different verdict.[72] However, the rule against disturbing a verdict if there is any evidence tending to support it must not be given too literal, technical, and strict an interpretation, and, for the verdict to stand, there must be in the record such competent evidence that, if uncontradicted and unimpeached, it will constitute prima facie proof of every fact essential to the cause of action or defense on which the verdict is based.[72.5]

It is also stated that the verdict will not be disturbed on appeal, although the evidence in support of it is vague, weak, or unsatisfactory;[73] and that the

More than scintilla evidence

(1) Where there is more than a scintilla of evidence to support plaintiff's case, appellate court cannot interfere with verdict.

Wash.—Rettinger v. Bresnahan, 257 P.2d 633, 42 Wash.2d 631.

4 C.J. p 854 note 74 [a].

(2) However, a mere suspicion or scintilla of evidence is not sufficient to authorize an appellate court to uphold a verdict based on such evidence.

Tex.—Perkins v. Lightfoot, Civ.App., 10 S.W.2d 1030—Advance-Rumely Thresher Co. v. Moss, Civ.App., 213 S.W. 690, error refused—Blumenthal v. Nussbaum, Civ.App., 195 S.W. 275, affirmed Nussbaum v. Blumenthal, Com.App., 221 S.W. 944.

(3) In many jurisdictions, the court has discarded the scintilla of evidence doctrine, and evidence sufficient to support a verdict must be substantial.

reviewing court cannot set aside a verdict or finding unless it can say on the whole evidence that it is the result of bias, prejudice, passion, corruption,[74]

Tenn.—Tallent v. Fox, 141 S.W.2d 485, 24 Tenn.App. 96.

Wash.—Adams v. Anderson & Middleton Lumber Co., 214 P. 835, 124 Wash. 356, modified on other grounds 221 P. 993, 127 Wash. 993.

(4) There are broad statements, however, to the effect that if there is a "scintilla" of relevant competent evidence to uphold the verdict of a jury, supreme court cannot interfere with the verdict.

S.C.—Stanton v. Yarborough, 18 S.E.2d 326, 198 S.C. 445.

Evidence meaningless to appellate court

On appeal from a judgment in an automobile collision case, the verdict would not be disturbed as not being sustained by the evidence where the evidence in the record was so indefinite and uncertain as to be practically meaningless to the appellate court, but which evidence probably was fully understood by the jury.

Ind.—Hoeppner v. Saltzgaber, 200 N.E. 458, 102 Ind.App. 458.

What constitutes

(1) To reverse a judgment on the ground that the jury was moved by prejudice, the facts and circumstances ought to justify no other conclusion.

Mo.—Brown v. City of Carthage, 175 S.W. 300, 189 Mo.App. 333.

(2) Reviewing court was not authorized to reverse judgment on ground that the conditions presented a picture which might have touched the sympathies of the jury and that this might have been heightened by presentation of case.

Va.—American Tobacco Co. v. Harrison, 27 S.E.2d 181, 181 Va. 800.

Passion or prejudice not shown

(1) Fact that the jury made a mistake in one of their findings, which was corrected by the court, is not sufficient to show that the verdict was given under the influence of passion and prejudice.

Kan.—Priddy-Maer Elevator Co. v. Wenzel, 243 P. 1016, 120 Kan. 423.

(2) Jury's action in finding all issues for defendants and allowing them the full amount of their counterclaim cannot be construed as indication of prejudice.

Mo.—Wolfinbarger v. Metcalf, App., 282 S.W. 749.

(3) Fact that the jury accepted evidence of defendant does not show passion or prejudice requiring reversal.

Wash.—Independent Order of Foresters v. Bonner, 145 P. 987, 84 Wash. 13.

(4) In an action against a municipal contractor and servant in charge of work for damages to adjacent property, that the testimony may have been stronger against the servant than against the principal contractor, and that the jury found for the servant, did not show passion or prejudice vitiating the verdict against the contractor.

Wash.—Curtis v. Puget Sound Bridge & Dredging Co., 233 P. 936, 133 Wash. 323.

(5) Where a verdict is sought to be set aside on the ground of passion and prejudice, there must be something to show that it was actuated by passion or prejudice; something more than a conclusion or imaginary condition; and the verdict will not be set aside unless there is some fact, circumstance, incident, or action presented and before the jury which should not have been presented, or, if it should have been presented was presented in an unwarranted, unlawful, and prejudicial manner, or in a way likely to cause bias and prejudice to arise in minds of the jury.

N.D.—York v. General Utility Corporation, 176 N.W. 352, 44 N.D. 51.

(6) In an action for personal injury alleged to have been sustained when a swinging car door struck plaintiff and threw him under trucks, a verdict for plaintiff was not influenced by prejudice, mistake, bias, or passion in view of evidence as far as liability was concerned.

Me.—Hatch v. Portland Terminal Co., 131 A. 5, 125 Me. 96.

should not be disturbed, each case must stand by itself;[84.5] and the appellate court in estimating the probative value of evidence may consider the difficulty of securing positive proof under the circumstances of the particular case.[85] In considering the question of the sufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict of the jury on a particular issue, the appellate court should consider the entire evidence unaffected by the conclusion of the jury on other independent issues.[85.5]

Conclusion to contrary by appellate court. As a general rule, the fact that the verdict is opposed to the opinion of the reviewing court, which if it had sat as a jury in the case would have come to the opposite conclusion, furnishes no ground for setting aside a verdict otherwise sustainable under the rules aforesaid.[86] As otherwise expressed, it is imma-

Written evidence. In a number of cases a limitation is recognized to the effect that, where the evidence is all in writing, as for instance in affidavits or depositions, the general rule that the verdict of the jury will be taken as conclusive does not apply, and the reviewing court will weigh the evidence on the theory that the reviewing court considers itself equally competent with a jury to consider written evidence.[87]

Application of rule to particular actions and elements of liability. The general rule that the verdict of a jury, supported by adequate evidence, is con-

View apparently to the contrary
Although all the evidence is the written testimony of a witness, who had died before the trial, the rule that, if there is any substantial evidence to sustain the verdict, it cannot be reviewed on appeal, obtains.
Mo.—Remick v. American Ins. Co. of Newark, App., 195 S.W. 1049.

Rule held inapplicable
Supreme court would not grant a new trial in action on ground that testimony of plaintiff and his mother was taken by depositions and jury did not hear and see the witnesses, even though rule permitting supreme court to determine questions of fact when fact-finding body has not seen or heard the witnesses were to extend to a jury finding, where plaintiff's case depended not merely on his own and his mother's depositions, but also on testimony given in open court by his brother and son.

Not lightly disregarded

The jury's determination of questions of fact in a personal injury action should not be lightly disregarded on appeal.

La.—Alford v. Lyons, 124 So. 690, 11 La.App. 670.

Absence of witness

In a personal injury action, failure of plaintiff to call as a witness in her behalf a physician who had treated her, and had been discharged as unsatisfactory, is not grounds for reversing judgment for her which was abundantly supported by positive testimony.

Mo.—Schroeder v. Wells, App., 277 S.W. 578.

Contradiction by physical facts

Where testimony of a witness in a civil action for personal injuries, tried to a jury, is contradicted and shown by physical facts in evidence to be impossible or false, verdict of jury based on such testimony should not be permitted to stand; but where there is other evidence not so affected by the physical facts, and which reasonably supports the finding of jury, verdict and judgment based thereon will not be disturbed on appeal.

Legal weight

There is no distinction as a matter of law in legal weight to be given to finding of negligence per se as distinguished from finding of negligence by jury.

Ga.—Tyson v. Shoemaker, 65 S.E.2d 163, 208 Ga. 28.

Act not pleaded

In determining whether there was legal evidence to support the verdict, the supreme court can consider no negligent act other than those pleaded.

Or.—Martini v. Oregon-Washington R. & Nav. Co., 144 P. 104, 78 Or. 283.

Proximate cause

In determining on appeal whether a negligent act is proximate cause of an injury, only facts will be considered, and findings that defendant was negligent and exonerating plaintiff from contributory negligence will be given no weight.

Evidence at close of case

In determining whether plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence as a matter of law, the appellate court must look to the evidence at the close of the whole case.

Mo.—Epstein v. Wells, App., 284 S. W. 845.

Court yields to jury

Where the court on appeal, as triers of fact, might entertain doubts as to whether the conduct of deceased in passing in front of defendant's engine in going over a public crossing was excusable, it will yield to the judgment of the jury.

Utah.—Malizia v. Oregon Short Line R. Co., 178 P. 756, 53 Utah 122.

Constitutional provision that contributory negligence and assumption of risk are jury questions is not merely declaratory of the common law, but requires that defense of contributory negligence as to questions of fact in all cases whatsoever shall at all times be left to the jury, and the finding of the jury on such defense is conclusive on the court.

Okl.—C. R. Anthony Co. v. Williams, 94 P.2d 836, 185 Okl. 564.

Assessment of contributory negligence

In action for damages for death, fact that the case was proper for the jury to assess plaintiff's contributory negligence did not prevent the supreme court review of the action of the jury in that respect.

Miss.—Boroughs v. Oliver, 85 So.2d 191.

Urbano v. Market St. Ry. Co., 46 P.2d 817, 2 C.A.2d 22.

To justify reversal of judgment for plaintiff in an action for personal injuries on the ground that plaintiff was contributorily negligent as a matter of law, contributory negligence must appear conclusively.

to matters of fraud,[87.36] and waiver and estoppel.[87.38]

b. When Reviewable

Although the verdict or finding of a jury ordinarily is conclusive on appeal, the action of the jury is broadly subject to control of the appellate court, and it may set aside the conclusion reached by the jury if against the undisputed evidence or if unsupported by the evidence.
